What To Do Now.
War Costs Money.
The Universe Expanding.
Foreign Made Sugar.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

H. G. WELLS writes and the John Day Company prints a booklet called, "What Should Be Done—Now."

Many Americans, especially politicians, would like an answer to that. You might like to know what H. G. Wells recommends.

First, world-wide general inflation (of money) for lightening debt and encouraging enterprise.

Two, a bold expansion of public employment and collective buying.

Three, readjustment of tariff barriers.

Four, nations adopting these measures would disarm as regards one another and arrange to protect each other against outside violence.

Also necessary is "the conversion of the common man to a sane economic faith and helpful acquiescence in broad measures."

All simple and very difficult.

REAR ADMIRAL SIMS calls the Spanish-American war pension system "a steal of the nastiest kind and an outrage on the American taxpayer."

He says the war lasted 114 days, fewer than 400 were killed, fewer than 5,000 died of wounds and disease. More than 227,000 of the 280,000 in United States forces are drawing pensions now, amounting this year to $119,000,000.

War is expensive, especially when you pay the bills that follow it.

All the improvements that this country needs, with billions to spare, could be paid for with the money that the big war is still costing the United States.

SIR ARTHUR EDDINGTON, a learned astronomer from England, seeks, on the radio, to popularize his theory that the universe is expanding "like the swelling of a rubber balloon."

He has contempt for scientists who say the universe is only ten thousand million years old. It is a hundred times older than that, according to Eddington, and you will be interested to learn that "through calculations made with purely physical data, using the ratio of curvature of empty space, and the number of particles in the universe, he finds that "the observed recession of galaxies is normal."

It's a pleasure to know that the universe is expanding. The more room the better.

It is even more pleasant to know that this little earth will last at least a hundred million years longer, with men living on it.

That should give us time to settle many problems, considering that we escaped from the late Stone Age only twelve thousand years ago.

A LONG SUIT of the government against the Sugar Institute, made up of great American sugar manufacturers, ends after seven months, and cost the government $50,000, the companies $1,700,000. Presently the learned Judge Mack will give his decision.

In connection with sugar the working people of the United States are interested in the fact that sugar eaten here is being refined more and more in foreign countries.

Peru, Mexico, England and other countries send sugar refined, ready for use. No American labor enters into its preparation.

If the United States continues buying and using products made by foreigners, that will mean trouble.

WE USE MORE sugar than any other nation, and sugar producing nations should be satisfied to send us raw sugar, letting American workmen refine it and get their share of the business.

President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, should be interested in that, apart from union matters, in spite of union objection to Mexicans and women and children being hired to thin out the sugar beet crop.

The important thing is that articles consumed in the United States be made with United States labor.

NEW YORK CITY plans housing projects in congested districts, tearing down old rookeries, building nineteen-story buildings to cost $72,000,000. The government would supply the money from that prolific "reconstruction" fund.

Anything that gives work and puts money in circulation is welcome. But it is probable that workers will want to move out of cities more and more. City buildings where workers would pay $12.50 per month per room, are not exactly cheap. Suburban houses with room for a family and a garage, costing three or four dollars a week for the whole house, are what the people need. They could be provided.

THE FRENCH say "everything passes." Even war hatreds pass. A while ago the British were solemnly promising that they would hang the Kaiser. He is living peacefully in Holland, and on Thursday the Prince of Wales, on his way to open a British exhibition in Copenhagen, landed at the Hamburg flying field and made himself agreeable to those he met. Fire and hatred both die out if you let them.

THE MISTAKE that Mr. Hughes made when he went to California as a candidate for the presidency is not made by Gov. Roosevelt.

Mr. Hughes did not see Hiram Johnson, who is a big slice of California, and he lost California.

Gov. Roosevelt enters California praising Senator Johnson as a "warrior for progress." Hiram Johnson will have no difficulty in seeing Gov. Roosevelt.

PITT MEETS OHIOANS IN DEBUT

Panthers Rule Heavy Favorites to Win Stadium Clash

By JESS CARVER

Decked out in its new Sunday-go-to-meetin' suit of rules and resigned to operate under a general price reduction, which figures to keep this year's receipts at least 40 per cent under the peaks of other seasons, the college football campaign breaks out in its first major rash today.

Six contests, headed by the Pitt-Ohio Northern tussle in the Stadium, are on the schedule for tri-state district schools. The Golden Panthers, apparently as powerful as ever, are prohibitive favorites to turn aside the challenge of the light Ohio Conference eleven. The Panthers, weighty and powerful, will get all the touchdowns they wish today and plenty of exercise. Ohio Northern will get the exercise.

GROVES FACE TIGERS

Besides the battle in the Stadium, five other contests of interest to district fans are on tap. At Grove City, the Crimson varsity of '32 makes its initial start under

Light Frost Expected Tonight

The announcement of Weatherman William Brotzman that a frost could be expected tonight brought joy to one large group and worry to another. The forecaster said that a light frost was due in the low parts of the district, and that the weather would remain fair and cold. Tomorrow is to be slightly warmer.

The first frost usually brings an end to the sufferings of hay fever victims, but flower lovers do not share their joy.

After a day in which the attending physician's reports were hopeful for the recovery of the United States Senator's wife, Dr. Ralph Falk issued a bulletin shortly before midnight saying her condition was "not as good."

Meanwhile consignments of serum to check the ravages of the parrot fever were being flown to Boise from Washington and Los Angeles. The first of two consignments from the Bureau of Health in Washington was aboard a plane arriving here early today.

TRUCE TO LET GANDHI EAT

By C. S. DE ANDRADE
International News Service.

POONA, India, Sept. 24.—A full agreement on electoral provisions for India's depressed "Untouchables" was reached at Yeravda Jail today, portending an early end of Mahatma Gandhi's "fast unto death."

Caste Hindu and "Untouchables" leaders immediately began preparation of a pact adjusting their differences to be signed tonight in the presence of Gandhi.

The conferees cabled Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, of Great Britain, announcing their agreement, and asking immediate government approval.

Such approval would automatically change the government's electoral program for India, against which the aged Mahatma is protesting by his fast, now in its fifth day.

Gandhi, very weak and suffering from dizziness and nausea, was cheerful at the news, although it was believed he would not end his hunger strike until Monday or Tuesday at the earliest.

LIBBY PLANS FIGHT AT TRIAL

Love of Child Prompts Vigorous Defense to Murder Charges

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Libby Holman Reynolds, facing the two great climaxes of her 26 years of life—motherhood and trial for the slaying of her husband—told Ward Morehouse, in a copyrighted interview published today by the New York Sun:

"God in heaven knows that I did not kill Smith Reynolds."

The interview, obtained by the Sun writer at the rustic retreat where she is awaiting the calling of her trial and where she is preparing clothing for the baby to be born of a marriage severed by gunfire early last July, quoted the former Broadway torch singer as saying:

"It is knowing that I am going to give birth to the child of the man I loved that affords me my only gleam of happiness, that gives me any desire to live at all. The fact that within four months I will have a child—his child—makes me strong enough to fight for a complete and absolute vindication."

FIRST INTERVIEW

The interview granted the Sun's columnist was the first in which the husky-throated Broadway singer has spoken for publication since her 20-year-old husband, an heir to the tobacco fortune of the late R. J. Reynolds, was found dying from a bullet wound at Reynolda, the family estate at Winston-Salem, N. C., last July 6. The widow said:

"I didn't shoot Smith. I loved him as I never loved anyone before or ever will again. The fullest and richest hours of my life were spent with him. I loved him tenderly, dearly and completely, and to him I meant everything. Everything.

"When I realized that he was gone, I didn't want to live. My life was over. To learn that I, his wife was actually suspected of murdering him stunned and horrified me, but it didn't matter. The fact that he was dead caused nothing to matter until I knew positively that I was to have a child. With that knowledge, with that gleam of happiness, I had something to live for, something to fight for. And now I want to go through with the trial. I want no strings left, no doubts left in people's

DEPORTATION OF BAZZANO KIN SOUGHT

Girl Who Saw Crime Shielded by Police At Inquest

Deportation proceedings were started against Santo Bazzano, 27, brother of John Bazzano, Pittsburgh racketeer who was slain in Brooklyn. He was arrested by government immigration inspectors on a warrant charging him with illegally entering the United States in July, 1925, as he was leaving the Coroner's inquest of the Volpe brothers. Bail was fixed at $5,000.

SAW VOLPES SLAIN

Santo Bazzano was a waiter in his slain brother's Rome Coffee Shop, 704 Wylie avenue, and present when the three Volpe brothers were murdered, but at the inquest was unable to tell a thing about the shooting, other that when a shot was fired he hid behind a counter.

On September 1 he had been questioned by immigration officers.

Homicide police won their battle to shield the identity of the petite brunette eyewitness to the Volpe massacre at the Coroner's inquest into the killing yesterday.

It was on the mystery woman's indirect testimony that a Coroner's jury recommended Guiseppe Spinelli, known as "Big Mike," and others to be apprehended and held to await the grand jury's action.

TESTIMONY OF GIRL

Detective Frank Dodson testified that his investigation led him to the woman who told him how she saw "Big Mike" seize John Volpe and pump six shots into him at close range.

Homicide Lieut. Frank Ferris refused to reveal the name or picture of the woman at the request of Coroner W. J. McGregor. Her picture was shown to the jurors later upon the insistence of the Coroner.

The slain Bazzano left no will and letters of administration were issued today to his widow, Mrs. Rose Bazzano, 1287 Washington road, Mt. Lebanon. The estate is valued at $24,000, of which $20,000 is real estate, according to records of the Register of Wills.

DIVORCEE SLAIN, SUITOR SOUGHT

AKRON, O., Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Three shots fired by an unidentified man killed Mrs. Edna Stewart, 37, a clerk of the Summit County Domestic Relations Court, last night as she entered her home in suburban Cuyahoga Falls.

The woman, an attractive divorcee, died in the arms of George A. Garlitz, of Cleveland, police said, while neighbors vainly searched for the slayer.

Later, police ordered a search for a Salem man who they said was a rejected suitor.

Garlitz is married, police said. He is held as a material witness.

Mrs. Stewart was the mother of three sons.

Five Convicts Escape From Rockview

BELLEFONTE, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Penitentiary Guard Michael Kersavage is nursing minor bruises today as he and others scour the countryside for five prisoners who overcame him and escaped.

Three Negroes and two white men "ganged" Kersavage last night when he opened the main cell block door to admit a prisoner who had been at work late. The terms of four of the escapes would have expired in 1933.

The jail breakers are Walter Gordon, Allegheny County, who was sentenced to 20 years for second degree murder; Jesse Ashcroft, Allegheny, 20 years, second degree murder; Frank Scott, Allegheny, 5 to 10 years, robbery, all Negroes; James West, of Philadelphia, 26½ to 35 years for robberies, and John deSimons, Erie County, 3½ to 7 years for breaking and entering.

Scott's term would have been completed in 1936.

DAVIS' TRIAL NEARS END

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The major evidence gathered by the government was on the court record today in its case against United States Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, director general of the Loyal Order of Moose, charged with violation of the federal lottery laws.

When the trial of the former Secretary of Labor is resumed next Monday, loose ends in the maze of financial and documentary evidence, alleging that Davis profited by $172,000 through two charity balls conducted as lotteries, will be tied together.

The prosecution expects to rest its case early next week.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Prince Michael of Rumania, in London on a grand tour, went to a West End cinema and had a pleasant time looking at one of those madhouse American film comedies.

He bought tickets himself, using meticulous English. He was delighted with the antics of the American comedians.

City Regains Lost Hour In Clock Shift Sunday

Pittsburgh returns to Eastern Standard Time at 2 a. m. tomorrow morning.

At that time, when clocks are turned back one hour, this district will have terminated its fifteenth year of sunshine saving and thousands of Pittsburghers who feel they lost an hour's sleep last April will be on their way to regain it.

Railroads serving this district have announced changes in schedules to conform with the new time. Most of the changes affected commuters' trains.

PITTSBURGH RAILROADS TO CHANGE HANDS IN MERGER

BESSEMER LINE ASSIGNED TO C. AND O.

Four-System Scheme Shatters Dream Of Taplin

Several railroads serving the Pittsburgh district are scheduled to change hands as a result of the completion of an agreement between the dominant systems for a series of mergers to put all the eastern railroads into four systems.

The agreement irons out the last disputed points barring the consolidation of eastern trunk lines. It will affect properties valued at $5,000,000,000. It will put an end to a struggle for domination which has lasted 10 years and has been marked by furious stock market battles for control of strategic systems. The Interstate Commerce Commission is understood to be in accord with the plan and, a week ago, was reported to have demanded that New York bankers controlling the systems use their influence to settle the remaining controversial points.

FOUR-SYSTEM PLAN

The consolidation will group the eastern railroads under four systems to be headed by the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, and Chesapeake and Ohio railroads.

The New England railroads, with the exception of the Boston and Albany, dominated by the New York Central, are not included in the plan. The question of the Pennsylvania's holdings in the New York, New Haven and Hartford and other New England roads has been left for settlement at a later date. The Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered the Pennsylvania to sell these holdings.

In this territory, the Pittsburgh and West Virginia is to be a terminal property controlled jointly by the four systems. No obstacle is likely to be encountered to this arrangement, since the road is controlled by the Pennroad Corporation, an investment organization formed by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

ENDS TAPLIN DREAM

This disposition of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia will be the death blow to the plan of F. E. Taplin, of Cleveland, to form a new trunk line from the Great Lakes through Pittsburgh to Baltimore. The Pittsburgh and West Virginia recently was extended to Connellsville, where it joins the Western Maryland, eastern unit of the proposed line. The Wheeling and Lake Erie was to be the western unit of the line. Under the accepted merger plan the Baltimore and Ohio will retain its control of the Western Maryland.

Industrial interests controlling railroads in this district are expected to oppose some phases of the plan. The agreement allots the Bessemer and Lake Erie to the Van Swearingens Chesapeake and Ohio system to give them an access to Pittsburgh. This line is owned by the United States Steel Corporation and it is believed that this organization will not be particularly anxious to sell this important unit in its transportation system.

The Montour Railroad, owned by the Pittsburgh Coal Company, is to become a jointly controlled terminal property, but officials of the coal company have declared that they do not want to sell the line.

Man's Throat Cut, Mystery, He Says

Everett Smith, 31, of 306 Sandusky street, found with a wound in his throat, in a third-floor room of a vacant house at 102 East General Robinson street, yesterday, was to be arraigned today on a disorderly conduct charge.

Smith told police he had been drinking, but was unable to account for his wound nor how he got into the house, police said.

Husband Slays Wife And Wounds Self

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Maria Perez Sandoval, 36, was shot to death in her sleep at her home near here yesterday and her husband, who police accuse of the slaying, shot and critically wounded himself.

The woman claimed to be a direct descendant of Gov. Albino Perez, who ruled New Mexico 100 years ago.

DAVIS' TRIAL NEARS CLOSE

That Davis told the 1931 Moose convention in Atlantic City that he kept in touch with every detail of the order.

That approval of Davis and the supreme council of the lodge was contained in a contract made between Bernard C. McGuire, promoter, and Theodore Miller, head of "the propagation department," which handled the Moose charity balls of 1930 and 1931 (the alleged lotteries).

That checks traced from the accounts of the propagation department found their way into the personal bank accounts of Davis.

That the order's magazine carried stories of Davis approving the work done on the charity ball.

Against this array of evidence, defense counsel contends that Davis was unaware of the details of the charity balls, did not see any of the tickets, and that his "organizing" contract was turned over to somebody else during a conference of high officials at Sharon, Pa., in August, 1930.

Chief Defense Counsel Charles J. Margiotti, of Punxsutawney and Pittsburgh, Pa., attempted to show under cross-examination of witnesses that the checks traced to the bank accounts of Davis were for debts owed the director general.

If convicted, the defendant faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $28,000 fine.

M'Closkey Defends Davis, Calls Administration Dumb

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—The fiery red head of Mayor "Eddie" McCloskey, of Johnstown, Pa., and bonus army fame, appeared in the rows of spectators' seats yesterday at the lottery trial of Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, in Federal Court.

After the session, he explained he was in New York on other business, but had "just dropped in" to see how things were coming at the trial.

Asked if he was a friend of the Senator's, he said:

"Sure—didn't he furnish 18,000 gallons of gas to move Father Cox's army from Washington to Pittsburgh?"

He was asked:

"How is it, if you're such a good friend of Senator Davis he's a friend of President Hoover, you aren't friendly to the administration, too?"

McCloskey said:

"All I've got to say is that any administration that would put on trial one of its own members for raising money for widows and orphans—and just before election—is pretty dumb."

Hollywood's 'System' Makes Cohan Shudder

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—George M. Cohan came home from Hollywood still shuddering at the dialogue of talking pictures.

He explained:

"Why, if my little boy wrote stuff like that, I wouldn't speak to him again."

He had anything but a kind word to say about the studio executives, declaring:

"Somebody ought to send them to a business school. They never get together on anything. I know as much of the technical end of their business right now as those guys who have been out there 10 years."

HEALY POSTS NEW BOND

A new bond was posted today by Constable John A. Healy, of the Nineteenth Ward, accused by political leaders in the ward of permitting liquor and gambling to flourish in his district. Healy posted a $2,000 bond, furnished by Louis Schwartz, of 1400 Murray avenue, Squirrel Hill. The bond was accepted by Garfield Ward, chief clerk in the miscellaneous department of the Clerk of Courts office.

Yesterday Judge Frank P. Patterson ordered the bond removed, as requested by Joseph McArdle, son of Councilman P. J. McArdle. Young McArdle had been bondsman for Healy.

Healy still has to request the court to appoint his deputies, as four of his former assistants were out of jobs because Judge Patterson revoked their commissions. The premiums of their bonds had not been paid, it was said. When the new deputies are appointed, their bond also must be approved by the court.

FAR EAST PROBE REPORT READY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—The Lytton report on conditions in the Far East will be published on October 1 and the League Council will meet to consider it on November 14, members of the council decided today.

This decision was reached at a session which opened with an address by Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish Free State, who presided. He expressed the regret of the council that Japan had recognized the new state of Manchukuo.

The Lytton report was prepared by a commission which included Gen. Frank R. McCoy, U. S. A. Under the auspices of the League it visited China, Japan and Manchuria to investigate relations between the two great eastern powers. Unofficial versions have said the report leaves room for argument by both countries.

NEEDY SHIVVER AS PINCHOT, R.F.C. FIGHT

Governor Seen Victor In Feud Over U. S. Funds

The needy and destitute of Allegheny County shivered in the cooler weather today, and waited for Gov. Pinchot and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to straighten out their tangle over the federal loan offered to Allegheny and two other Pennsylvania counties.

Two million five hundred thousand dollars were offered by the corporation, Thursday, as a loan to the state for use in Allegheny, Philadelphia and Northampton counties.

But Gov. Pinchot yesterday demanded that he be permitted to direct its distribution, since the state would be borrower and not the counties.

PINCHOT MAY WIN

Today it became known that sentiment of the R. F. C. is that, as one official put it, "there is no way our corporation can follow-up on this loan and the Governor probably can use the money in any county or city which he may select."

The money will be available at once, if the Governor signs a receipt for it, it was learned.

Unless it can be tapped next week, however, the pangs of hunger will mix with the bite of cold in the county, outside the city, for the September allotment of state aid—only resource of the county now—will have been exhausted by Wednesday.

SUM INSUFFICIENT

The R. F. C. loan of $2,500,000 was approximately one-hlaf of the amount requested by Gov. Pinchot for use in the three counties for a four-month period. The Corporation allowed the small amount for two months.

Allegheny County's estimated need was $1,300,000; it was assumed, today, that it would receive $650,000. After expenditure of the money, a further call will probably secure more.

Relief leaders here could not understand today just what grounds the Governor had for his attack on the R. F. C.'s naming of the counties who are to receive the loan. It was learned that, in applying, he asked for the $5,000,000 and accompanied his request with figures showing need of the three counties at that amount.

His request, the only one backed by complete figures to be made by Pinchot, was granted within 48 hours.

Delay Refused in Double Divorce

Motion to discontinue a postponed hearing on a divorce suit started a year ago last June by Morris Wolf, jeweler of 6348 Waldron street, against his wife, Mrs. Della Berman Wolf, was denied late yesterday by Judge James R. Macfarlane.

Morris and his brother, Harry, were married to two sisters, Della and Anne Berman, respectively, in a double wedding, February, 1928. Both brothers instituted divorce proceedings a year ago, charging desertion.

Bridge Date Causes Court Postponement

BALTIMORE, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Judge Albert S. J. Owens in City Court postponed a civil case, an appeal from a magistrate's decision in an automobile accident, because Mrs. Eugenia Lamble Brick had "an important bridge date."

Mrs. Brick, the plaintiff in the case, told the judge she had won at the bridge game. She also won her appeal before Judge Owens.

ROAD OPENING MONTHS AWAY

The $3,000,000 Allegheny River boulevard that takes the motorist nowhere because the Pennsylvania Water Company's plant is in the middle of it, will probably not be opened to traffic until next year.

The latest decision of the County Commissioners is to have the Pinchot-controlled Public Service Commission come here and rule on the question of condemning the property of one public utility for the use of another. The two utilities are the Pennsylvania Water Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Commissioner C. M. Barr was in favor of immediate and direct action. He said:

"If the Public Service Commission does not act I am in favor of going into court at once."

Commission C. C. McGovern remarked:

"This is a unique question for the Public Service Commission to decide. It will set a precedent in the future."

Commissioner William D. Mansfield smilingly added his remarks saying:

"The way to solve this question in the future is not build any $3,000,000 boulevards with places in the middle that you cannot get through."

VOTE DEVICES STIR M'GOVERN

Discovery at yesterday's commissioners' meeting that another gadget hitherto unmentioned in reports and investigations is missing from the vote machines precipitated a hot discussion. The mechanical device in question is called a vote link, but Commissioned Charles C. McGovern called it "the missing link."

McGovern declared:

"This whole vote machine business is idiotic. The experts say you have to have tools to cheat them. If you went after an old-fashioned ballot box with a can opener, you would get caught, and the same thing would happen to a man with the tools in a voting machine booth."

COYNE EXTENDS COUNTY, CITY COST PROBE

Delinquent Tax Office To Be Studied, He Promises

With one sub-committee of citizens already appointed to investigate the cost of operating the County Board of Viewers, the City and County Assessors, the Registration Commission, the Jury Commission, and the expenditures of the Board of Education, Senator James J. Coyne announced that another group will be appointed within a few weeks to study the operation costs of the Delinquent Tax Office and the Register of Wills.

Yesterday, when Senator Coyne announced the work of the two committees, it was the first time that the Registration Commission, the Jury Commission, and the Register of Wills' office had been brought into the scope of the study of the legislative committee. The first committee named by Senator Coyne will be composed of C. C. McKallip, and J. R. Brady, of the Real Estate Board; Edgar J. Kaufmann, R. K. MacConnell, trust officer, and Maj. Philip Mathews, of the Governmental Research Bureau.

ASSAILS COSTS

Senator Coyne said:

"It costs too much to run the Registration Commission. I am in favoor of permanent registration. It would do away with the four registration days and save the county a lot of money."

Senator Coyne also attacked the delinquent tax office. He said:

"I can say that the delinquent tax collector is getting too much money. I will submit a bill in legislature to reduce his commission. If you appoint a man and pay him $7,000 or $8,000, he will just sit there and collect his salary."

Senator Coyne said the Registration Commission costs about as much to operate as does the office of the County Commissioners. He asked for suggestions along the lines of changing the number of commissioners and letting those that remain be on duty in their office all the time to receive any voter who wishes to change his address.

LAWS OBSOLETE

W. G. Negley, of the Allied Boards of Trade, was the first to appear before the committee. He said that Allegheny County is operating under laws for the horse and buggy days while it was living in the automobile and airplane days. He asked that the committee aim for equality of tax burden.

Negley then mentioned the School Board. He said:

"I cannot forget that we had a 10-year fight to get away from the 40 independent boards in Allegheny County, each assessing for taxation. We don't want to get back to that system, but we should tell the present board that it is traveling too fast."

The board of appraisers then came in for criticism by Negley, who said:

"I hate to think that on Monday morning 200 men will start out to appraise every piece of property in the county and report back by November 1."

TAX SUGGESTED

Here James Wettach, a member of the legislative committee, asked Mr. Negley if the high school cafeterias paid a mercantile tax. Mr. Negley said he was not certain.

Mrs. Violet Happer, of the Thirty-second Ward, complained that she knew two assessors who only spent part time on their jobs. She said one worked for a railroad and the other was a butcher.

It was at this point that Senator Coyne announced his committee. Representative George Soffel, a member of the committee, interrupted to ask if the delinquent tax office was to be included in the work of the committee.

Coyne replied:

"I am having another subcommittee look into the delinquent tax office and also into the Register of Wills office. I will name this committee soon and it will have a couple of auditors on it."

ECONOMIES SUGGESTED

Margaret Gray, who several years ago was in charge of the City Recreation Bureau, told of her work with the city and suggested consolidation of the recreation facilities either under a city head or under the board director.

One More Chance To Register for Election

Residents of cities in Allegheny County who have been assessed, still have one chance to qualify in order to vote at the November election.

October 8 will be the third and last registration day in the cities. This is also the last day to pay poll taxes. Only those regularly assessed can pay taxes.

September 7 was the last day to be assessed.

Marion Davies Lauded By Swedish Prince

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—(Universal.)—Louella O. Parsons, motion picture editor and Hollywood writer of the Hearst newspapers and Universal Service, was entertained today by German film executives at a luncheon in her honor at the Aldon Hotel. Foreign office officials attended.

Miss Parsons blushed, apparently because of stage-fright, when she delivered what she said was the first speech of her life, which her auditors enthusiastically acclaimed.

Erich Pommer, head of the German U. F. A. Corporation, then took Miss Parsons to Bebelsberg, Berlin suburb which serves as the Reich's Hollywood, where she visited the studios, met the stars and watched them in action.

She met Prince Sigvard, son of the Crown Prince of Sweden, who is regisseur of U. F. A. Prince Sigvard told Miss Parsons:

"I am anxious to visit Hollywood. I am an enthusiastic admirer of Miss Marion Davies, whom I consider the world's outstanding interperer of light comedy roles."

To this, Pommer added:

"It is a pity Germany has no artist who has Miss Davies' qualities."

Miss Parsons will be the guest of Oskar Straus, famous composer, tomorrow, and will go to Vienna Sunday.

SOCIETY GIRL PURSUED HIM, RIDING MASTER DECLARES

BLAMES PLIGHT ON JEALOUS RELATIVE

Miss Gibson's Wealthy Parents Confident She'll Win

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Dashing Sidney Herbert Homewood, Rockland County's handsome riding master, did not seek love, but had it thrust upon him, he declared today.

Blaming "jealousy and anger" for the charge that he betrayed Charlotte Gibson, 23-year-old society girl, Homewood today bluntly denied her story of having whispered honeyed words to her as they cantered through wooded glens or waxed romantic in the soft moonlight.

'PURSUED' HE SAYS

In fact, he declared that the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gibson, social registerites, of Tappan, actually made love to him. He protests, with just a touch of scorn in his words:

"She was continually hanging around the riding academy. All of the attention was on her part—not mine."

He blames his present predicament on a relative, a busybody, he says, who persuaded the Gibson family to interest the district attorney of Rockland County in the friendship existing between Charlotte, an expectant mother, and himself. He explained:

"Early this summer Mr. Gibson sent for me and said he would arrange a marriage for Miss Gibson and myself. I told him I'd think it over. Later he again summoned me."

And right there, according to the riding master, he stepped out of the matrimonial setting. He said:

"I'm going into court with a clear conscience and have no fear of the consequences."

'JUSTICE' SOUGHT

The optimistic view taken by Homewood concerning his exoneration certainly is not shared by Gibson, prominent New York attorney, his wife, nor the intimates of Miss Gibson.

Her mother, although greatly upset and highly nervous over the affair, said with undiminished confidence:

"It is all up to the District Attorney. I'm sure we will see justice done."

In her behalf, Charlotte claims that the equestrian expert made five distinct appointments to marry her and failed to appear for any of them.

When the trial comes up, Monday, another debutante will be on hand to testify against Homewood.

DEBUTANTE TO TESTIFY

She is Miss Elizabeth Bishop, student at Wheaton College in Massachusetts and daughter of John G. Bishop, wealthy New York broker.

Miss Bishop is reported to have been engaged to the riding master until her father convinced her that he did not appear to be a suitable companion.

Among the possible witnesses to be called by the defense is a cavalry officer who graduated from West Point last June and a prominent New York bank official, both of whom are reported to have shown an interest in Miss Gibson.

Conviction on the betrayal charges carries a maximum jail sentence of five years and a $1,000 fine.

'I Didn't Shoot Smith'

LIBBY HOLMAN REYNOLDS . . 'I LOVED HIM . . WANTED TO DIE'

The Widow Reynolds, who today in the first interview since the gun-death of her youthful husband, Smith Reynolds, tells of her preparation for the anticipated birth of their baby—in January.

Libby Tells Her Plans To Fight at Trial

minds as to my innocence. I don't only want acquittal—I want a complete apology."

TELLS OF DEATH

Morehouse asked her to tell him of the happenings of the night of Smith Reynolds' death. The Sun quoted her as saying:

"It was about 12:30 o'clock, I believe, when I heard Smith call out my name. I saw him standing beside the bed, our bed, with a pistol to his temple. I remember nothing more, though I had the feeling of holding his head in my arms and having the warm blood pouring through my nightdress against my skin. I don't remember going to the hospital. I remember nothing that happened there."

She described Smith as "morbid." She said:

"I'd often sit up with him until 6 o'clock in the morning, arguing and pleading. He had some strange delusion that I was going to leave him. He'd often disappear for hours at night and come back weeping with joy because I had not fled."

She said he was "never without a pistol" and explained:

"He often said to me, 'If anything happens there's always the little Mauser.' Many, many times I'd see him holding the pistol to his head. More times than I can remember he threatened suicide."

BABY NAMED

The baby she is expecting will be named "Smith," the Sun's interview said she declared:

"Boy or girl, that's to be the name."

She continued:

"It will be hard to convice people that I married Smith Reynolds because I loved him. There were times when I pleaded with him to get himself disinherited. I told him we could get along. During my married life I paid my own way. I saw nothing of any Reynolds money. Why, I had much more money than Smith had—much more. I made a lot of money on the stage."

"This trial will take every penny I can scrape up. I'll soon have a child to support. I'll go back on the stage. That's the only thing I know how to do."

Asked where she would like to have the child born:

"I don't know. Not Cincinnati—not the South. Maybe in France. I feel like a man without a country. But tell Broadway that it's my fight and I'm game; that I can take it."

Concerning Ab Walker, who has been indicted with her in connection with Reynolds' death, she said:

"Ab Walker worshiped Smith. He was utterly devoted to him. If Smith had said, 'Ab, go shoot yourself,' Ab would have done it."

Convict's $100,000 Burglar-Proof Lock Myth

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Cal., Sept. 24.—(INS.)—San Quentin Prison officials admit Harold Marks, 31, the penitentiary's so-called "lock expert," fooled them.

Marks asserted more than a year ago that he had invented a burglar proof lock in his cell. Later Marks announced he sold his invention to an eastern lock manufacturing firm for $100,000.

Today, State Parole Officer Ed H. Whyte disclosed that Marks' lock was not fool-proof, that the eastern concern did not purchase the invention and that he believed the $100,000 was simply a myth.

12 BOYS SEIZED IN FOOTBALL BATTLE

5 Wilkinsburg and 7 Westinghouse Fans Later Released

Their egg fights and street battles past without serious mishap, students of Wilkinsburg and Westinghouse High Schools were to journey to Graham Field, Wilkinsburg, today for the annual football game which always is a high point in the season's program for both schools. Five young men were taken into custody in Wilkinsburg and seven were arrested in Pittsburgh as a result of the battles last night. All were discharged.

Scores of motorists passing through Wilkinsburg last night were forced to drive through a barrage of over-ripe vegetables and aged eggs as Wilkinsburg students staged a demonstration at Penn avenue and Center street. Five of the crowd were taken into custody and released after a reprimand. No one was hurt.

A number of the motorists who were pelted with vegetables, were supporters of the Westinghouse eleven and they returned to their home territory in Homewood and there armed themselves with baskets of tomatoes. They were preparing to invade Wilkinsburg when police from the East End station arrested them on disorderly conduct charges. They were released on their own recognizance and discharged when arraigned before Magistrate J. Scott Morgan today.

At the hearing it was learned that Daniel Gruber, 17, of 7020 Monticello street, was the only Westinghouse student. The others, former students, said they were Edward Lewis, 20, of 1220 Pine Ridge street; Samuel Collhasker, 18, of 1225 Eastview street; Philip Loffler, 17, of 1205 North Murtland avenue; Edward Blackhall, 18, of 7325 Frankstown avenue; William Battorf, 19, of Cheswick, and Robert Moore, 18, of 238 Columbia avenue, Penn Township.

Wilkinsburg and Westinghouse high school officials had issued a warning to students that a recurrence of last year's riot, in which several persons were reported struck by missiles, would result in cancellation of the game.

BLAST BURNS WIFE SLAYER

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—(INS.)—Crazed by failure to find employment, Appollo Speranti, 40, hacked his wife to death with a hatchet today, opened gas connections, fired the couple's home and was probably fatally injured when a terrific explosion wrecked the little two-story dwelling.

Firemen who rushed to the scene found Speranti's wife, Helen, 35, slashed and hacked, lying on the floor of her bedroom. She died a few moments later.

Speranti, suffering from probably fatal burns and from inhalation of gas fumes, was taken to Temple University Hospital.

Neighbors said Speranti had been acting queerly for a week and had complained bitterly of his failure to find work.

Window Smasher Scores Police For Laxity

CLEVELAND, Sept. 24.—(INS.)—This city's police department today smarted under the pertinent criticism of one of its customers.

An unemployed man, hungry and with no place to sleep, hurled a brick through a department store window and then calmly waited for police.

He was there some time, but attracted no attention. Disgusted, he finally walked to Central Police Station, nearly a mile away, and reported his crime. Locked up, he told officers:

"Just call me John Doe. I'm 42 years old and I haven't any home. And if you ask me, the police service in this town is not so hot."

3 JAPS START GOODWILL HOP

TOKIO, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Three Japanese aviators were speeding along over the Northern Pacific today, headed for Nome, Alaska, and San Francisco on a goodwill flight from Japan to the United States.

The flight, sponsored by the Tokio newspaper Hochi Shimbun, which sponsored two earlier flights that came to grief last year, began at 5:35 a. m., today from Samushiro. At 10:16 a. m., the radio station at Ochiishi picked up a mesage from the plane's radio giving its position then as 20 miles off the southern end of Etorofu Island in the Kurliles, abouot 750 miles northeast of Tokio.

The weather was reported good. The three aviators are Eiichiro Baba, pilot; Kiyoshi Honma, navigator, and Tomoyoshi Ishita, radio operator.

The schedule calls for stops at Nome and Fairbanks, Alaska, and San Francisco, but emergency supplies have been laid down at White Horse and Hazleton, Can., and Seattle.

The plane carried fuel for 40 hours' flying and the fliers hoped to cover the 2,670 miles from Samushiro to Nome in a little more than 30 hours.

NOTE IN GIRL'S HANGING HELD GENUINE

Long Grilling Fails To Shake Story Of Companion

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Two developments in the strange death by strangulation of pretty Miss Sylvia Rockin, 23, artist model of Long Island, N. Y., lent support to a theory of suicide today.

Police determined after expert analysis that a note found after her death and openly hinting suicide was written in Miss Rockin's handwriting, and three hours' intensive questioning failed to shake the story of George B. Speidel, 30, married government worker arrested in connection with the case.

UNSHAKEN BY QUIZ

Speidel was quizzed until 1 a. m. at police headquarters—part of the time in the presence of the dead girl's sister and brother who came here from Long Island—but did not substantially change his story that Miss Rockin hanged herself. Police said they were virtually convinced of Speidel's innocence, but that he would be held until adjournment of a coroner's jury which will look into the case on Monday.

It was Speidel who notified police of Miss Rockin's death. He said he was asleep when she killed herself, on a houseboat, which Speidel had leased and where, he said, he and the young school teacher and artist model were living a Bohemian sort of life.

BELIEVED INNOCENT

Both Mrs. Laura Kramer, of Ozone Park, L. I., and Benjamin Rockin, the dead girl's sister and brother, are satisfied Speidel had nothing to do with Miss Rockin's death, police said.

One angle of the case remains a puzzle. Officials were still unable to explain the rope burn about the neck of the dead girl. Homicide squad experts have pointed out the burn continues around the neck without a break, while ordinarily, in cases of hanging there is a break of an inch or more where the neck hangs away from direct contact with the rope. This was the circumstance which at first led police to investigate the possibility that the girl had been garroted.

CAPTIVE'S DOGS FAITHFUL

NEWCHWANG, Manchuria, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Two faithful dogs, constant companions of Mrs. Pawley, an English woman who was kidnaped by Chinese bandits nearly two weeks ago, have become important characters in the drama of her kidnaping.

One of them is a big Alsatian and the other a mahogany-coated Irish setter. They were with her when the bandits captured her. The Alsatian escaped and found its way back to the home of her father, Dr. Phillips. It barks incessantly as though trying to indicate that its mistress is in trouble.

Letters from Mrs. Pawley, carried by an intermediary, have told that the setter remains with her, sleeping beside her at night and eating from her bowl, although the bandits repeatedly chased it away.

He has promsied to forward funds to permit the caravan to move to California.

Manganese Dumping Blamed for Idleness

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—J. Carson Adkerson, president of the American Manganese Producers' Association, in a statement, called upon producers to take steps to bring prosperity to the industry, at the same time blaming "foreign dumping" for unemployment of American manganese workers.

Half a million tons of manganese ore were said by Adkerson to have been imported during 1931 with shiploads continuing to arrive while American mines in 34 states remain idle.

RIVER COAL MINERS

ROSEMARY MATRONIC JOANNA MRAS

Tiny "assistant miners" at East Vandergrift, where unemployed fathers and sons—and a few women, too—wade up to their armpits in the shallow Kiskiminetas to mine a submerged coal vein.

JOLLY AMPHIBIAN MINERS . . . . . THEY HAVE TO DO THEIR DIGGING UNDER THE WATER

Part of the coal fleet—an assortment of battered boats and barges—busily engaged "off East Vandergrift in the Kiski," which already has yielded to keep needy homes warm this winter more than 4,000 bushels of coal for about 100 families. These are Sun-Telegraph pictures.

Needy Dig Winter Coal From Mine in River

The Kiskiminetas River, flowing shallow and yellow-green past East Vandergrift, is alive today with battered skiffs, resounding to the clang of hammer on crowbar. Scattered groups of men and boys, sometimes up to their armpits in the cool water, wield shovels, carry laden baskets. They are mining coal.

Oldtimers used to gossip that the river, by this town, flowed over coal beds. But it was up to two boys, Stanley Mineski, 16, and Joe Hrobak, 17, both of Elm street, East Vandergrift, to make the practical strike Monday a week ago. They were examining a broken stone on the shore, saw it was black inside—was, in fact—coal.

Since then it is estimated that about 4,000 bushels of coal have been taken from the river, supplying perhaps 100 families. The men exploiting the under-water coal mine are all unemployed. Even a few women have joined in the work. In spite of the depression, East Vandergrift homes will be warm this winter; "Old Man River" is no sob song there.

GRANTS GIVEN 3 CHURCHES 145 YEARS AGO

One hundred and forty-five years ago today, three of Pittsburgh's oldest churches received grants of land from the Penns. The first grant was to the First German Evangelical Protestant Church, Smithfield street. The congregation, however, dates from 1782, when the Rev. Johann Wilhelm Weber preached to his first German congregations in a log building at Wood and Diamond streets. In 1833 a large brick building replaced the log church. In its cupola the first church bell in Pittsburgh was hung. In 1868 the building which stood until a decade ago was erected.

The second Penn grant was to the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue, then under the care of the Rev. Samuel Barr. In 1784 the presbytery of Redstone appointed supplies to Pittsburgh and in 1785 the Rev. Barr organized the congregation. He remained pastor until 1789. A log church with squared timbers was erected.

The second pastor, the Rev. Robert Steele came in 1800. A new brick church was completed on the Penn grant in 1805.

In 1811 the Rev. Francis Herron became pastor and remained until his death in 1860.

The third Penn grant was to the congregation of the Protestant Episcopal Church, now the Trinity Cathedral. In 1797 John Taylor, not yet ordained, gathered together the adherents of the church was built on the Penn tract. In 1871 the present church building was erected. Trinity was inaugurated as Trinity Cathedral on June 3, 1928, with the Rev. Dr. Kammerer as dean.

More than 400 persons are expected to attend the one hundred fifty-sixth anniversary celebration of the Lebanon Presbyterian Church on the Lebanon Church road today. The celebration will be opened by the Rev. Harry Barr, of Ohio.

MARTIN PLEADS HOOVER CAUSE AT RALLY

Gen. Edward Martin, state Republican chairman, last night in North Side Carnegie hall defended President Hoover's "battle against the depression," and declared that "direct repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is almost an impossible task at the present time."

An overflow crowd of more than 1,000 stood outside the crowded hall as Gen. Martin fired the opening gun in the presidential campaign in Allegheny County. Among the other speakers were Judges Joseph Stadtfeld and William M. Parker, of the Superior Court, State Senator Frank E. Baldwin, candidate for auditor general; District Attorney Andrew T. Park, President John S. Herron of City Council, Mrs. Laura J. Hinnau, county vice chairman, and Congressman Harry A. Estep, candidate for re-election in the Thirty-third district.

COLEMAN PRESIDES

Presiding was County Chairman William H. Coleman who predicted Allegheny County would give President Hoover a majority of 55,000.

Pointing that the President has fought to maintain the American standard of living, Gen. Martin recorded the methods the President used as follows:

"He has demanded a tariff high enough to prevent the flood of goods made by cheap labor in Europe, sponsored a building program by federal, state and local governments; stopped immigration, conciliated capital and labor and prevented strikes and misunderstandings between employer and employes which were universal in former panics and depression. He upheld confidence in the financial world and halted many bank failures by organizing a private pool."

DEFENDS HOOVER

General Martin explained that the Eighteenth Amendment requires approval of three-fourths of the states for repeal, and pointed out that 13 states can halt its repeal. He continued:

"Undoubtedly, sentiment has greatly changed since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. However, the constitutional fact that 13 states can block repeal makes it obvious to any reasonable person that direct repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is almost an impossible task at the present time. It will require years of constant effort to effect it. For instance, a dry vote by the 13 smallest states, with a population of less than 6,000,000, would prevent repeal even if desired by 35 states with a population of almost 117,000,000. This seems unfair, but nevertheless it is a fact.

WET GAIN SEEN BY IDA TARBELL

The world is suffering because "it is topheavy with industry," declared Ida M. Tarbell, noted author, on her arrival here last night from New York for a four-day sojourn at Hotel Schenley gathering material for a new book. She added:

"Too much attention is given to industry and too little to agriculture. Agriculture is the basis of our civilization."

Miss Tarbell predicted that more women will vote wet this year than before, but it will be hard to dislodge the dry forces of the W. C. T. U. and the Methodist Church.

Before returning to New York Miss Tarbell plans a visit to Allegheny College, Meadville, her alma mater. She is a member of the board of trustees of the college.

Presidential Trend by States

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart. The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

RANDOLPH SEES G. O. P. DEFEAT

Prediction that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will carry West Virginia was made here today by Jennings Randolph, Elkins, W. Va., Democratic congressional nominee in the second district.

Randolph added the Democratic presidential nominee would probably carry the state by 80,000 majority. This was based on a study made during his swing through 13 counties, nominally Republican, in conducting his own campaign. A Democratic governor also can be expected, he added.

Randolph, who has covered the second district in an intensive campaign during the past month, announced plans for 100 speaking engagements during the last 26 days before the election. The campaign route will follow directly in the path of his opponent, Congressman Frank L. Bowman, Morgantown. Randolph is a namesake of William Jennings Bryan, who was a close friend of the family. The heavy speaking tour follows the example of Bryan's successful drive through Nebraska for Congress.

Swedes to Exhibit Film of Homeland

Motion pictures dealing with life in Sweden and made by the government of King Gustav V. will be shown in the auditorium of Schenley High School next Thursday night. The pictures, which were made at a cost of $200,000 are being shown here under the auspices of the First Swedish Methodist Church. The Rev. Dr. John Franklin, Maurice Eriksson and Oscar Larson are in charge of the local showing.

GOV. ROOSEVELT GAINS IN WEST

By COLE E. MORGAN
United Press Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Gov. Roosevelt's campaign excursion into the West began to show tangible results today with the recording of new ballots from that section in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

Seven of the eight states of the Middle West grain belt returned substantial majorities for the Democratic nominee, increasing the majorities he already had to his credit in those states. Five of these states gave him larger majorities on this week's returns than he had obtained through the returns of the preceding week. Likewise he cut into President Hoover's majority in Kansas, the one Middle West state leaning to the Republican ticket.

Iowa gave Roosevelt a majority for the week of 204 out of 1,442 new ballots; Minnesota, 285 out of 2,383; Missouri, 99 out of 2,965; Nebraska, 537 out of 1,677; North Dakota, 113 out of 321; South Dakota, 71 out of 299, and Wisconsin, 387 out of 1,711.

The 886 new Kansas votes gave Hoover a 42 majority.

These Roosevelt gains in the Middle West added 2,554 to his poll majority in the country as a whole, bringing it up to 46,734, with 279,212 ballots recorded. In total returns of the week he has made a net gain of 7,834 votes.

SMITH LAUDED BY ROOSEVELT ON COAST

ROOSEVELT SPECIAL, EN ROUTE TO LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Lauding his outstanding rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, Alfred E. Smith, before a San Francisco audience as a "great citizen and a great governor," Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared the challenge of "the campaign has not been accepted" by the distinguished gentleman who is running against me."

The Democratic nominee concluded a 27-hour stay in San Francisco with an address to 12,000 persons last night in the civic auditorium. Later he entrained for Los Angeles, where he will stop today.

SECOND TALK

The auditorium talk was the second in San Francisco. Before the Commonwealth Club, an organization of Golden Gate businessmen, Mr. Roosevelt asserted:

"We must build toward the time when a major depression cannot occur again.

"If this means sacrificing the easy profits of inflationist booms, then let them go and good riddance."

During his stay in San Francisco, the hub of the northern California activity, Roosevelt was assured by leaders of all Democratic factions that participated in the spring primary, that he would carry the state. They were William Gibbs McAdoo, leader for John N. Garner, who won the state's convention votes and is now vice presidential nominee; Isadore Dockweiler, the Smith leader, and Justus Wardell, who headed the Roosevelt campaign.

In the speech before the Commonwealth Club, a non-political organization of business men, Roosevelt said that the task of today is one of adjusting production to consumption and of distributing wealth and products more equitably.

Listening In— Star Coming Back. Shadow Creeps Near. Pat's Fan Mail.

Miss Greene

Rosaline Greene, who first attracted attention by winning the title of the "Girl with the Perfect Radio Voice" at WGY, turns tables on a seemingly waning star to stage a radio comeback this year. She's slated to take the feminine lead in the NBC-WEAF revival of "Show Boat," in addition to a leading role in a WOR sketch. She first gained laurels at NBC as the lead in "Joan of Arc" and other features.

Again the "mathe-maniac" statistician has been at work. He computes, on a most conservative basis, he says, that the writers of the 30,000 letters Pat Barnes receives every week consume 250 eight-hour days, or more than eight months in writing—allowing only four minutes for the penning of each letter. He further estimates that, during the 18 months Pat has been on the air, listeners have spent more than 54 years at their correspondence with the broadcaster.

The Shadow, that omniscient presence, wrapped in secrecy, is scheduled to return to the air via NBC October 5 with his weird, and original, mystery tales.

Just before he goes on the air, Tommy McLaughlin, "Threads of Happiness" star, prepares for action by wrenching his collar open—but keeps his coat and vest on . . . He never stands more than six inches away from the microphone, but makes no attempt to sing softly . . . He says it's up to the engineer to keep the volume down . . . Keeps his hands in his pockets, stands pigeon-toed when singing and bends his knees to the rhythm of the song he's singing.

Ted di Corsia and William Adams, who portray the roles of President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in "March of Time," are friends of long standing. After making vigorous speeches about each other's policies, they invariably leave together for a cup of coffee and a sandwich.

Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle is greatly puzzled, has a pedal organ of uncertain ancestry on his hands, and is out $4.63—all because he blithely returned to his hotel room from work one day and found the organ where the bureau should be . . . He called the hotel manager, who, incredulous, pointed out that it was against the rules of the hotel to have an organ in the room and intimated that Stoopnagle was going a little too far. With that he left, only to return and ask the Colonel concerning the $4.63 drayage charges which had been assessed. There the matter rests, despite the fact that when you push the pedal you agitate F-sharp and the Colonel. It is very, very mysterious.

Vithalbhai Petel, noted Indian jurist and legislator, is guest speaker during the Columbia Public Affairs Institute on WJAS tonight at 10:15 o'clock. Mr. Patel received most of his early training in England.

"The Road to Yesterday," an unusual dream play by Buelah Marie Dix, concerning a girl who dreamed that she lived in the days of Shakespeare, is the S. R. O. presentation on KDKA at 9:30.

Listeners are taken on a musical tour of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland when Erno Rapee visits Scandinavia on WCAE at 9.

The ever-harmonizing Boswell sisters give their version of "Crazy People" on WJAS at 9. Nat Shilkret's Orchestra, on the same program, is heard in a special arrangement of "In a Shanty in Old Shanty Town."

Story of Lost Battalion On WCAE

Speaking over an extensive NBC network from the studios of KDKA tonight, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the Industrial Rehabilitation Committee recently organized in Washington at a conference called by President Hoover, discusses "Rehabilitating Industry." His topic is based on the theory that the decrease in expenditures for equipment, machinery and plant facilities constitutes one of the major factors of the economic situation in the United States. Mr. Robertson, who also is chairman of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company's board of directors, is scheduled to go on the air at 7:15.

Mr. Robertson

Columbia University's opening game with Middlebury College in New York today is scheduled to be broadcast over a Columbia chain, including WJAS, from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m., inaugurating an extensive schedule of football broadcasts from all parts of the country. Ted Husing reports the game, with Les Quailey, former Alfred University quarterback, as his observer. Ozzie Nelson, known to radio as a vocalist and band leader, assumes a new role when he describes the crowd and explains the sport's new rules. Nelson, before entering radio, played quarterback at Rutgers.

The real story of the famous "Lost Battalion" is revealed over the air for the first time during the K-7 secret service dramatization on WCAE at 8:30 tonight. The story of the action in the Argonne Forest when Maj. Charles W. Whittlesey's command was cut off from communication, is presented with the permission of the 77th Division. Capt. George G. McMurtry, who commanded a portion of the troops in the pocket, and Prvt. Abraham Kartoshinsky, who succeeded in reporting back to the American lines, are guest speakers.

Program Pointers

Evelyn Herbert and Robert Halliday, stars of "Desert Song," "New Moon" and "My Maryland" who have just returned from London where they have been co-starring in the sensational operetta, "Waltzes From Vienna" under the banner of Sir Oswald Stoll, make the first of four guest appearances on the Magic Carpet during the cigaret dance hour on WCAE tonight at 10. Their program is composed of hits from some of their most famous shows. An augmented orchestra under the direction of Louis Katzman also is heard.

TUDOR MOTIF DOMINATES EDGEWOOD MUNICIPAL HALL

Structure Resembles Huge Residence; Novel Design

By PENELOPE REDD

"The Prisoner's Song" might have been less plaintive had the prisoner composed it in the jail of the new Edgewood Municipal Building. The recently completed structure, which resembles a large, handsome residence, will be dedicated informally today and tomorrow. The committee desired a building for a community of self-governing citizens who regard the law as a positive civic expression rather than an agent of punitive repression.

Miss Redd

Consequently, Lake and Davidson, the architects, selected the domestic architecture of the law-abiding English. The Tudor style fulfills the conditions governing the design which required that many individual activities be housed. This style consistently permits the incorporation of happily rambling units into a decorative sequence.

GOLDEN SANDSTONE

The designers have reinforced their departure from the bleakness of official jails by heightening elements such as color and pattern which are fundamentally important in this domestic architectural style. Thus, the principal building material is a sandstone predominantly golden in hue accompanied by an obligato-like chromatic gamut ranging from buff to violet. Not only are these colors repeated in varying intensities in the slate of the roof and of the terrace paving, but the materials are laid up in that irresistible pattern known as "random bond."

In the main elevation on Race street, the Tudor tower provides the stability necessary to render coherent the frankly individualistic units. At the eastern end of the facade, the house of the chief of police makes a cozy feature. The court room, police department and jail adjoin. The Tudor tower acts as stairway, tower for drying fire hose, and as a smokestack. The facade concludes with a unit devoted to the tax collector's office, the most decorative place for the purpose in this district, we wager.

HUGE DOORS HIDDEN

A unique triumph of the building is the concealment of the great, gaping doors necessary for the fire department, in the north wing at the rear.

The upper floor of the north wing provides living quarters for the street and fire force. The council chamber, also on this level, is designed to focus attention on that body. A massive walnut V-shaped table backed by a proscenium arch outlined in silver gives a dramatic stimulation to the administration of the community's affairs.

The building, moreover, was constructed at a time when prices were low enough to give the community double the value in materials. T. Roy Allen is chairman of the building committee and the members are: Frank Demmler, Dr. R. R. Jones, O. F. Strohman and Carl Brueck.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

The debutante season this year is not going to be the delightfully dizzy whirl it was before Wall street, the Twentieth Century Humpty Dumpty, took its great fall.

"This year is different from former years," the mother of a Sewickley debutante told me yesterday. Even the few debut parties that will be given will be simpler than in former years.

One reason, besides the economic reasons, is that some of Pittsburgh's conservative matrons, who have spent years aiding hospitals and various philanthropies, have received abusive letters when announcement was made of debut plans.

Harmful to Needy

These "Bolshevik letters," as this Sewickley leader described them, are shortsighted if the writers were thinking of the unemployed.

For a large debut party, in the before-the-market-crashed days manner, gave employment to scores of people working for caterers, for florists, for dressmakers, for specialty shops. And indirectly to folks employed in furnishing raw foodstuffs, employed in furnishing raw materials, employed in factories making fabrics. And on and on.

John K. Deasy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Deasy, will leave Monday to enter Yale. He was graduated with honors from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.

Guest at Shields

Do you recall Katherine Phillips' debut in Washington a year or so ago? Katherine is the daughter of ex-Congressman Thomas W. Phillips, of Butler and Washington.

This week-end she's the house guest of Caroline Crittenden, of Shields. And Caroline's grandmother, Mrs. James B. Oliver, will give a small dinner tonight in the Allegheny Country Club for her granddaughter's guest. After the dinner the young folks will join the club's Saturday night dance.

A little daughter joined the smart set yesterday. She arrived at St. Margaret's Memorial Hospital and is the first child of the Leonard Mudges. Mrs. Mudge is the former Nancy Allderdice.

* * *

There's an engagement to be discussed today, too. The John F. Laffertys, of Amber street, announce the betrothal of their daughter, Margaret Douglas Lafferty, to James Murdoch Henninger, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Henninger, of Aiken avenue.

Margaret is a graduate of Wellesley, and her fiance of Williams College.

Lelia Earhart Bride of This Afternoon

This afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Schenley Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, another fall wedding is being solemnized. The bride is Miss Lelia Frances Earhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Earhart, of Atwood street, and the bridegroom is James W. Craft, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Colvin Craft, of Uniontown. The Rev. T. F. Chilcote is officiating, before an embankment of ferns, crotons and palms.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, is wearing a gown of lovely cream lace, with a yellow velvet turban and she is carrying yellow roses and blue delphinium. Miss Helen Cavitt, the maid of honor, is wearing blue lace with a matching hat of velvet and carrying Johanna Hill roses.

Dr. Donald Hustead, of Uniontown, is serving as best man and the ushers include a brother of the bride, Charles Earhart, Jr. James Trotter is playing the wedding music.

A reception and dinner for the immediate families is being held in Webster Hall, after which Mr. Craft and his bride plan to leave on a motor trip and after October 15 will be at home in Creedmore avenue, Brookline.

Recent entertainments for the bridal party included a dinner at the Summit Hotel, Uniontown, given by Mrs. Maud Buttermore, an aunt of the bridegroom. Miss Cavitt gave a bridge party; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Price, of Chesswick, also gave a bridge; Mrs. Harold Perry, a dinner in her home, and Charles Kuckert gave the bachelor party.

Befeathered and Beruffled Golfers Vie at Field Club

Costume golf seems to be gaining in popularity with the members of Pittsburgh's country clubs, and yesterday the Pittsburgh Field Club had a fling at it. They began with a 10:30 o'clock breakfast in the club, and were all seated at one long table, on which the decorations were long-necked green bottles utilized as holders for tall orange candles, and after the breakfast votes were taken on the costumes.

Mrs. Karl W. Warmcastle, who is chairman of the women's golf, as a Negro mammy and Mrs. Walter Curley, Mrs. C. L. Beares, Jr., and Mrs. C. I. Wendt, as her Amos-and-Andy-like family, attired in bandannas, striped jerseys and raggedy trousers, were awarded the honors for having the "lousiest costumes" and "next lousiest" were Mrs. S. Lanahan and Mrs. W. J. Birmingham as a "lady and gent" of a past era.

Costumes chosen as most laughable were those of Mrs. Paul McGraw and Mrs. L. E. Bingel, who were much bedecked with feathers and silk, and Mrs. Bingel's of black taffeta with a feather boa and much befeathered hat, made a particularly unwieldly golfing costume. Those chosen as having the most authentic costumes were Mrs. W. J. Stebler, in an elaborate black and white taffeta and lace creation with many taffeta ruffled flounces, a black taffeta cape and velvet hat with many flowers, and Miss M. L. Byrnes, dressed as a boy. The next most authentic were Mrs. D. A. Barrett, who looked rather like a burlesqued Adolph Menjou, with a painted mustache, high silk hat, frock coat and pastel trousers, and Mrs. Duncan Taylor, in a demoded dress.

Mrs. W. Arch Irvin was in black lace and silk, very full of skirt and high and boned of neck, and two very cute farmerettes were Gretchen Warmcastle, in flowered overalls and straw hat and Mrs. C. B. Pritchard in checkered overalls and wide straw hat. And there were ever so many more that I can't remember, and also a large group of spectators, not in costume, who gathered around the impeded golfers on the first tee, and cheered wildly at every drive, whether successful or not.

Ingram Junior Club Starts Season Monday

Miss Veve M. Cratty, continuing in office, will preside at the opening meeting of the Junior Women's Club of Ingram, on Monday in Firemen's Hall. There will be an amusing sketch "Face to Face with the Mike," after which members will play bridge.

Hostesses are Mrs. J. R. Kelly, Mrs. Ralph Logan, Miss Alice Wilson, Mrs. John R. Taylor, Mrs. A. P. Craig and Miss Laura Fisher. Mrs. W. H. Appel, Mrs. J. S. Thomas and Mrs. E. H. Kilmer will serve as ushers.

Wilkinsburg Fine Arts Group to Meet Monday

A box luncheon Monday is to mark the first fall meeting of the fine arts department, Wilkinsburg Women's Club, at the home of Mrs. Howard Jackson, Newlinsburg. Mrs. M. M. Redenbaugh, of the Joseph Horne Company, the guest speaker, will talk on "You and Your Home."

Foster W.C.T.U. to Hear Talk by Regina Bartley

"Temperance and Health," with Regina Bartley as speaker, is the topic announced for Tuesday's luncheon meeting of Foster Women's Christian Temperance Union in the Congress of Clubs. Music will be by the Union Quartet.

Chorus to Sing At Braddock Meeting

Its own Madrigal Chorus will make its first public bow at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Braddock Junior Woman's Club, which will be held at the home of Miss Mildred Cramer, Fourth street.

The evening will be given over to "a political review," Mrs. John McFarland discussing "The Electoral Vote," Miss Alice Bair giving an outline of party platforms and Miss Betty Watkins and Mrs. George McClure engaging in a debate on whether prohibition, as it exists, is undermining the morals of the nation.

Mrs. Charles Giesler will add her chapter of the club's original story.

O. D. Young to Open Club Conference

By Mrs. Charles M. Bregg.

Word concerning plans for the conference on club programs, to be held Thursday in New York, has reached local clubwomen who, even if they do not attend, will watch with interest the developments at the conference. With 10 state federations and a number of national groups requesting invitations, the number has, of necessity, to be limited.

The conference will be opened by Owen D. Young, who will discuss some of the important economic and social readjustments necessary as a result of the shorter working week. President Hoover is to give a message by telephone magnifiers from Washington to close the conference.

The sessions are divided into (morning) "The New Day in the Home;" (afternoon) "The New Day in the World," and (evening), "The New Day in America."

Other Speakers

Other morning speakers will be Dr. Douglas Thom, director of mental hygiene for the state of Massachusetts; Royal Cortissoz, art critic; Irita Van Doren, Fannie Hurst and Walter Damrosch.

In the afternoon the speakers will be Walter Lippman, Dr. James T. Shotwell, co-author of the Kellogg pact; Dr. Mary Woolley, president of Mt. Holyoke College, and Dean Gildersleeve, of Barnard.

The evening session will be opened by Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire, who is the leading exponent of the five-day work week. Another speaker will be Isham Randolph, head of the Secret Six in Chicago, who will discuss prevention of crime due to idleness. Dr. William A. White, leading psychiatrist, will describe psychological adjustments to changing coaditions and other national problems will be taken up by other speakers.

Monaca Woman's Club To See Fashion Show

Having held its president's day last Monday, the Monaca Woman's Club will move on regular program schedule, meeting the first and third Monday of each month until May.

Among its more notable programs will be a fashion show by Miss Elsie Hoewisher, of Boggs & Buhl, a talk on "Cathedrals of the Old World," by Mrs. Anna Marshall McCracken, of Carnegie Institute, a twelfth anniversary party, an address by Dr. William Pearson Tolley, president of Allegheny College, and one by F. A. Barkey, assistant superintendent of schools in Beaver County.

Miss Jane Crumrine Returns From Europe

Miss Jane Crumrine, Ben Avon, arrived on the Berengaria in New York, yesterday, from a four-month tour of Eastern Europe and England. Miss Crumrine, after spending a few days at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Crumrine, 2 Hilands avenue, will return, October 10, to Bryn Mawr College.

INDIVIDUALITY MARKS WRAPS AND ACCOMPANYING FROCKS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 24—Evening wraps are undergoing decided changes in style. They are no longer listed just as evening wraps, by themselves, but are divided into classes according to the gowns they're to be worn with. The wrap which accompanies a formal white satin gown has really very little relation to the little short jacket or cape worn over a white pique dance frock.

MADAME SCHIAPARELLI, one of the first women in Paris to wear short wraps—it was a costume of a little white coat worn over a black gown—now takes to a little form of shawl-cape that serves as an evening wrap with all but the most formal frocks. Madame Lanvin, who designs many voluminous evening coats for her, chooses for herself a short pailletted jacket for practically all her evening gowns, wearing it underneath longer wraps.

* * *

ACCORDING TO present fashion plans being made in Paris, evening wraps for the coming season will be of three varieties: the short jacket which may be worn as a wrap in itself, or worn underneath a longer wrap; the full-length wrap which covers entirely all except evening dresses with trains; and a third type—the newer—the wrap that is three-quarter or seven-eighths length.

* * *

BRUYERE'S THREE-QUARTER wrap, sketched today, is interesting not only for its length, but the way in which the bands over the shoulders cover the upper-arm leaving the elbow and fore-arm bare. It is of rich dark red velvet, collared with black fox.

LELONG'S SHORT velvet jacket trimmed with ermine shows the new use of the cape motif. It is in midnight blue.

Should a Man Help at Home When His Wife Works?

Is dishwashing "women's work" and is it beneath the mister's dignity to help the missus do it?

Even when she works just as hard as he does on the job down town?

Laura's Big Boy is convinced that it is. So no matter how tired she is after coming home from the office and rustling dinner, he flatly refuses to do a thing around the house.

"My mother never expected my dad or any of the boys to do such work as that, and I'm not going to do it for you!" sez he. "That's your job, and it's up to you to do it!"

Is that the way your Better Half thinks and acts? Or have you trained him to be a Regular Fifty-Fifty Husband? If you have, give us your recipe. Laura wants it.

"Dear Sally:

"Will you please tell me what you think about husbands helping with the dishes?

"I think they should help, when the wife helps keep things going by working downtown, but my husband doesn't agree with me.

"We have been married for four years, and I have worked all that time, not especially because I wanted to, but because Bob didn't get a great deal of salary, and the only way we could marry and be together was for me to keep the old job.

"At first he used to think it was a lark to help me—a little at least. But now I guess he's beginning to settle into an 'old married man.' Anyway, for quite a while now, he has flatly refused to help me do a thing around the house. He said it was 'getting to be a habit' for me to expect him to, and he wouldn't stand for it. For months now we've been having arguments about it.

CLAIMS UNFAIRNESS

"He gives me long speeches about dishwashing being 'women's work,' and how his mother never expected his dad or any of her boys to do it, and says that no man should be expected to do such things.

"Now if I were home, keeping house and nothing else, naturally I'd never expect him to help me, except maybe in some emergency. I know he works hard all day. But so do I. And I think that when I help financially to keep his and my home going, it is up to him to help me with the 'home end' of things.

"Maybe you won't agree with me. But I think that if you do and say so, it may help him to see how unfair it is for me to do two jobs, and he only one.

"He can't seem to realize that things have changed since Mother was a Girl, and that if a man can't make enough to let his wife stay home and do what he considers 'women's work' he should see that he shares the burden of taking care of that home, so she will have a little time to rest and enjoy herself, as he expects to when he comes home.

WANTS OPINIONS

"I can't see why helping his wife with the dishes should be beneath a man's dignity, or why the idea should make him feel outraged. I wonder if most men feel this way? If so, why? Is it just simply because they've been so used to having women wait on them?

"I would like to hear from some of the other wives—and husbands, too—on this subject. I'm perfectly willing to work down town and help with the expenses. Fifty-fifty marriages are oke with me, but I think they should be 50-50 all the way through. That seems to me only fair. Am I right? If I am, I'd like to know how other wives have managed to convince He Men like Bob of it.

"LAURA."

How about it, boys?

Do you expect the li'l woman to help buy the groceries—and do all the home work, too? Do you think it's up to her to do the home work, regardless, just because she's a woman and you're a man?

Or do you think papa should pitch in and help her, if she has to help rustle the rent 'n' the grub?

And you, sister? Have you a husband like Bob? And have you succeeded in getting him to change his notions? If you have, let's hear how you did it.

"VIEW OF THE SEA"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

What the inlander expected to see on his first view of the ocean—and what he DID see! He went to the wrong place, of course—he found that out later. What he had dreamed of was a sea-scape colored by Conrad and given a human touch—perhaps by a 1932 Hollywoodian mermaid. What he saw was Humanity-by-the-Sea, in all its curiousness! Later—he found the deep blue sea to be just his same grand and awesome self, wide beyond the limits of adventurous thoughts, colored by the sky and the God who made both, aloofly lonely, terrible in beauty, shimmering, restless, trimmed with white foam, whose glassy bubbles are lovely to look upon and frightening to ride upon, home of romance and mermaids and hidden strangeness, irresistible where it is deep, playful where it thins upon golden sand. The same old sea!

The inlander floated pieces-of-wood boats on ditches in alfalfa fields when he was little—and saw the sea inside his head. Later he read Conrad and De Morgan, and studied the marines in the local art exhibit. He watched its breath-taking surges in news reels and ship pictures. And one day he arrived, on his way to a long, long vacation for to see some of the world, at the big town near the sea. And the first thing he did was to climb aboard a train that would take him to a beach. And upon his stupified view appeared the cross-section of summer-seaside life at the right!

He had dreamed of the inspired imagery at the left—nothing but beauty, immensity, aloneness. With perhaps a human mermaid, suggesting faintly the presence of Love, as the last touch of romance.

Can you remember your first view of the sea? I do. It was as flat as a pancake—and looked as if it would spill over on the land!—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Letter of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—A college friend of mine asked me to accept a bid from her brother (whom I did not know) to the Blank Academy ball and graduation; also to spend the night and the following day at her home. I accepted. Her parents and sisters were exceptionally gracious during my stay and I had a lovely time. Now I've heard that it is a custom for the girls who have attended such dances to send a note of thanks to the boy after they return home. Am I right, and would this hold for a "blind date?"

2—Should I also send a note of thanks to his mother and father?

3—Should I send both notes or just one, and which one should it be, and what type note should it be, formal, or more personal?

4—Just how long should I wait if I am to reply?

I am sure that just a few words of advice from you will solve my problem, which at this time seems so difficult for me because it was altogether a new and different experience. I'm sure you will never realize the great help you have given me when I feel that I have done the "right" thing. READER.

1. Yes, you are right about this. The fact that your invitation comes directly from a person whom you do not know does not make any difference. The important thing is that everyone was so kind, so hospitable; and this kindness, this hospitality should be deeply thanked for. Make your note of thanks as gracious, as articulate as you possibly can. You and your manners and your sense of appreciation will be "on parade" and you will be judged by this letter, not only by the fact that you write it, but by the way in which it is written.

2. Yes, a note to the mother. The note to the mother, the hostess of the home, is the most important one, as a matter of fact. This is the one that is to be written first, and then the others, to those who had part in offering you such splendid hospitality. The note to the mother will include your expression of thanks to the father also. Don't write a separate note to the father, but do write a special one to your friend, the girl whose brother invited you.

3. Don't make your notes formal, for there was nothing formal in your invitation or in the form of entertainment. Make your notes chatty (not unattractively personal, of course, but most friendly). Thank first for the hospitality in general... the fact of their kindness in asking you, their thoughtfulness, their friendliness. Then make special mention of the definite things that they did for your happiness and comfort and delight.

4. Write and send your notes as soon as possible. I suggest too that you think of something very attractive and appropriate to send to the mother, your hostess, with your note of thanks. Something not too personal, but something that will at once register your taste and discrimination.

The Bride's Gown

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me if the groom pays for the wedding gown, or if the bride pays for it? My friend and I have been arguing over the question. R.

There is no cause for argument about this question, dear friend, for the rule is of the most definite kind. The bride or her family pays for the wedding gown. For the groom to do so—well, he just mustn't.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Exception to the Rule

Occasionally the best bidding does not produce the maximum results, but this is so rare an occurrence that it does not justify a departure from the principles of sound bidding, as the occasions when bad bidding brings more satisfactory results are rare, indeed.

The hand below was played in a team-of-four match, and at one table Mr. Oswald Jacoby sat North and Mr. Walter Malowan South.

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

Mr. Oswald Jacoby

♠ Q J 8 3
♡ Q 7 4
◇ A 8 5
♣ 9 5 2

Mr. Walter Malowan

♠ 9
♡ A K 9 3
◇ K Q J 10 7 2

North

♡ J 10 8 6 5 2
♣ J 6 4

South

♠ A K 10 7 5 2
♣ A K Q 10 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	4 ◇	4 ♠	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South, with a perfect two-suiter, still should not have opened the bidding with any other than a bid of one, as the danger of playing the hand short of a game contract, with a strong partner, was slight, indeed. The Opening bid of one spade was therefore perfectly correct, as was West's Overcall of two diamonds.

North now disclosed that his hand contained little value in the way of playing-tricks, but did have adequate support for the spade bid so far, at least, as trumps were concerned, and that the hand would produce as many tricks as South had reason to expect from the bidding in the actual play. After learning that North could stand the spade suit South, of course, forced on the second round by bidding four clubs, and West overcalled with four diamonds. North's second bid disclosed a preference merely, with no additional values. The bid of five hearts by South, which followed, was unconventional, but so was the hand, and North easily decoded the message, which was that Mr. Malown felt that the hand might produce a slam if North held first round control of the diamond suit. North, who up to this time had made minimum bids, now felt justified in bidding for the Small Slam, which was readily made with an overtrick.

At the other table the bidding followed an entirely different trend. The bidding there was:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	5 ◇	Double	Pass
5 ♠	Double	Pass	Pass
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

When North doubled five diamonds, South might have counted on a diamond trick in the North hand and then risked a Slam bid. However, he had not in the bidding disclosed his freak distribution, and he felt certain that West would make a Penalty Double of the bid of five spades, and in this he was not disappointed. South redoubled and took all the tricks for a total of 2,100 points, as opposed to the score of 1,460 points scored when the Slam was bid and made in the other room.

South explained that he had given up all hope of a Slam following West's vulnerable diamond bid, expecting, of course, a loss of 2 tricks in that suit, and thus deciding that the better strategy was to play for the Double. The sequel proved that in this instance he was right.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Should West overcall South's Opening bid of one spade with one notrump on the following hand?

♠ Q 8 7 4 ♡ K 8 4 ◇ K 1 4 ♣ K 8 5

Answer: No. A pass is the best procedure, in the hope that North and South will reach a contract beyond their depth.

Garden Bouquet Quilt - Block 5 - The Trillium

A DIRECTION LEAFLET that will aid in making the Garden Bouquet Quilt will be sent free to any reader sending a stamped, addressed envelope to Nancy Page, in care of this paper.

Before the members of the Nancy Page quilt club began work on the trillium block they studied the diagram of directions for putting the quilt together. They did this because when they had finished the wild rose block they had made the first four blocks used in the top row of the quilt.

By studying the diagram they saw they needed to seam one of the smallest triangles at the upper left side of the first block, the tulip. This meant the 12½-inch side of the triangle matched the 12½-inch side of tulip block.

Then at the upper right of tulip block and joining to the upper left of second block—the cactus—was put in one of the larger triangles. Another was seamed between the upper right of cactus and upper left of lily of the valley. A third was put in between upper right of lily block and upper left of wild rose. And at the upper right of wild rose was put one of the small triangles. A large triangle went on lower left of first block, the tulip. Joining the lower right of tulip to lower left of cactus went a large diamond—the first one to be put in thus far. Then came another diamond joining right of cactus to lower left of lily. A third went between lower right of lily and lower left of wild rose. And a triangle was seamed to lower right of rose. With that clear in mind the group were ready for the trillium.

First of all, to disarm all criticism, Nancy admitted that she was shy one green leaf and that the two which were drawn did not start from the right spot on the stem. But when you are an artist, you are entitled to use certain freedom to make a design look well. And that's what I have done." "Explanation accepted and agreed with" said the group. "let's start."

The trillium is made just like the other blocks, using outline, applique with invisible stitch or button hole, or using colored crayons. Of course we all know that Nancy chose applique with invisible hemming stitch.

The method of taking off the pattern is similar to that used for other blocks.

The trillium may be developed in soft lavenders or pinks. The three small petals showing at the back may be green in a light shade or a deeper shade of the same color used for flower.

Since they are all exactly alike it is not necessary to cut more than one of them for a pattern.

In this block, as in the others, bias tape is used for stem of flower. The small circle in center of flower may be worked in satin stitch using fast color embroidery cotton or it may be made of a tiny circle of material appliqued.

The meek and the saucy birds are appliqued in place and the fifth block in the quilt is finished.

BACK BLOCKS SUPPLIED

In the event you have missed any of the Garden Bouquet Quilt blocks previously published in this paper please send 10 cents for each block missing. Also enclose stamped, addressed envelope. Address Nancy Page, care of this paper.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

That Fidgety Child May Have St. Vitus Dance

Not so long ago in a movie I saw a picture showing the peasants of central Europe taking part in what is called the "dance of Saint Vitus." This ceremony has been performed at regular times for more than five hundred years. A superstition attaches to the ceremony that all who take part will be protected against the disease known as "Saint Vitus dance," or "chorea," as it is medically called.

Dr. Copeland

This is one of the common diseases of childhood. It occurs at any age, but is most frequently seen between the fifth and fifteenth years. It afflicts girls more than boys and is found among the poor rather than the rich. The disease is rarely, if ever, met among Negroes or the American Indians.

Chorea in children is often overlooked. There is no complaint of pain, and the only apparent sign of the disease is that the child appears fidgety and clumsy in his actions and movements. The child is in constant motion. The hands, the feet and the head move about in purposeless fashion. The muscles of the face cause grotesque expressions. As the disease progresses there is lack of normal muscular action, shown by difficulty in picking up objects, in stooping and in walking.

In mild cases, these movements entirely disappear during sleep, and they can be controlled for the time by the firm but kindly commands of the parent or physician. In severe cases, the movements may continue during sleep and be impossible of control at any time.

Often the child is unable to speak, or if he does talk, his words are choppy and difficult to understand.

There is backwardness in school work, for the disease is often characterized by dullness, carelessness and loss of memory. The appetite and general health are only slightly influenced, although there is some loss of weight. A mild form of anemia may accompany it.

Simple cases of chorea are not to be feared, but they should receive careful attention and special effort must be made to prevent the one serious complication. This is involvement of the heart. If the heart is affected the attack may persist for a long time, from several weeks to several months, and sometimes more than a year. If proper care and attention are not given, a persistent heart murmur results. This may seriously interfere with the health of the child as he grows older.

A child suffering from chorea should be under the personal supervision of a physician. Diseased tonsils and adenoids will be removed and all physical defects corrected whenever possible.

The best treatment is absolute rest in bed. The child should remain in bed for at least three months. During this time all meals should be served in bed.

Exciting and exerting games and all other forms of mental excitement should be avoided. Warm sponge baths should be given when the child becomes excited.

Keep Faith With the Young

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

A childish shriek of pain echoed down the long hall of the office building, then a howl, prolonged and continuous, followed by the kindly voice of a dentist saying: "But, Son, it's all over! What are you crying about now?"

A few convulsive gasps, words punctuated by sobs that refused to stop, and the childish voice replied: "But Mother, you said it wouldn't hurt—not one bit." Mother was standing by, while the sobs continued steadily. They were not cries of pain any more, but of an outraged confidence that had meant bitter disillusionment to the child.

Mother had probably thought a little white lie was justifiable if it got Sonny quietly into the dentist's chair. But what about the next time, or the next. What about the time that's sure to come when Mother will so desperately want Sonny to believe her? And if he doesn't—will that be the fault of Sonny, or the dentist, or the doctor? Not at all. There will be no one to blame but mother.

Faith in us—Sonny's faith in Mother, especially—is the one big thing that should be preserved at all cost; for when one is very young Mother and Dad and those close about him are his whole world, and his attitude later toward the big world outside the home will be a perfect reflection of his first small world. When some truthful dentist assures the boy that what he is about to do won't hurt a bit, it will not be at all surprising if Sonny looks him straight in the eye and says "Oh, yeah?" The dentist will be outraged and Mother will be mortified at the boy's rudeness, but at the root of the whole thing will be the little falsehood which kept Mother comfortable for an hour.

If it is going to hurt a little tell the child. If it is going to hurt a lot, tell him that. To offset unpleasant things, which we all must endure from time to time, plan something nice to follow, a new toy, or luncheon downtown at a hotel, or an especially desired excursion next day.

But you impair something very vital and beautiful when you plant the seed of doubt in your child's mind as to your own veracity.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hot oil treatments are more effective in removal of dandruff when they are followed by applications of steaming towels. Scalp flakes are loosened, the shampoo next morning floods them away. Never, if you value a normal scalp, remove dandruff with the fine teeth of the comb.

Gooseflesh on the arms is no beauty bargain. It gives way before vigorous scrubbings with warm soapsuds and a heavy brush, which treatment makes blood streams gallop, skin function, pores behave. Dry thoroughly, anoint with olive oil or cold cream, friction well. Remove cream with a turkish towel—the rough surface digs out the emollient—and dust the arms with talcum, patted in briskly. Alcohol rubs are recommended.

Cosmetic chemists foresee every need of the beauty seeker. In one box now, they put two tones of powder, so that, as the summer bronze departs, a lighter shade of beauty calcimine is at hand. You can buy two lipsticks light shade for daytime, darker for night, or visa-versa if you have a knack of doing the opposite of the usual rule.

Trust not to one method of keeping the complexion scrupulously clean. Use soap and water. Use a cleansing cream. Once a week apply a pack made by combining kaolin (refined Fuller's earth) with witch hazel to form a thin paste. As long as chimneys emit soot, face cleansing will be the most important part of the beautifying ritual.

Household Hints

To clean a white felt hat.—First of all brush the hat well to remove any dust. Now mix an ounce of powdered calcined magnesia with enough cold water to make a smooth paste and brush this all over the hat, then leave to dry. When perfectly dry brush the hat all over to remove every trace of powder, then the felt should be quite clean. If it is very dirty the process may need to be repeated.

Are there two or more women in your household, all of whom have adopted the excellent habit of washing out their silk hose after each wearing? Perhaps you have equipped your bathroom with a small, inconspicuously placed rack for the express purpose of drying them. But with the similarity of popularly worn shades these days it is often hard to distinguish your hose from mother's or sister's. One family devised a system which avoided an argument. One sister arranged to always hang her stockings with tops down and the other with toes down. It saved many a perplexing moment.

Delay your phfffting.
Give this some quick consideration
And quit your quitting!

Your husband sits, and lets his daze
Come up and floor him.
So change your mind. You used to share
His love . . . and now
Although you do not seem to care . . .

You should return and do your part;

Old, Perhaps, But Clean!

James Stone relays the one about the small boy who asked a policeman for the correct time. The cop pulled out his watch and obliged.

"It's 10 minutes to 3."

"Well," teased the upstart, "at 3 you can jump in the lake!"

At this the officer burned to a crisp and chased the kid all over the neighborhood until the Sergeant happened along and scolded:

"Haven't you any respect for your uniform chasing a kid like that all over town?"

"Sarg," explained the cop, "that darn kid asked me for the time. So to be nice I told him it was 10 to 3 and then he tells me at 3 to go jump in the lake!"

"Hm," said the superior pulling out his own timepiece, "what's your hurry? You've still got five minutes!"

As If We Didn't Know

Master Ashendorf observes that the major difference between a magician and a show girl is that the magician is always trying to conceal something.

In America, Yet!

J. G. Taylor Spink, who knows a good quib when he hears one, offers this. Joey Sewell, of the Yankees, had put up at a dinky hotel in a dinky town which boasted but one hostelry. And when he examined his bill preparatory to departure, he found an item:

"Bath, 25 cents."

"Mistake, isn't it?" asked Sewell, as he showed it to the clerk-proprietor.

"Nope, t'ain't," barked the owner, "if we didn't charge extry, everybody'd be takin' 'em!"

Such Goings On!

An Altoona (Pa.) movie house recently billed its double-feature this way:

"John Gilbert — 'Downstairs' with 'Wild Women of Borneo!' —Passed by State Board of Censors!"

Newspaperman Stuff

In Cleveland they tell it about Harry Fenton, who for years statistated and filed things in the morgue of a morning rag in Detroit. Recently the city desk wanted to run a picture of the Woolworth Bldg. Fenton was on vacation. Members of the staff volunteered and searched the morgue under such listings as "buildings," etc., and even under "Woolworth," but no dice. They finally dug one up at the Public Library.

When Fenton returned from his holiday, they told him of their hectic time. He left the room and soon returned with a picture postcard of the thing.

"Well, I'll be ——" groaned the editor, "where was it? We couldn't find it anywhere."

"Simple," was the reply, "I had it filed under postcards."

Fenton, adds the paragraph sender, "is famous for things like that."

In Fewer Words

The long-time argument about dramatic critics, who seldom go to the bother of dressing in tails or dinner clothes for the premieres, came up again last night. The same crack: "We go to the theater professionally, not socially!" was offered.

And then one of the craft was reminded of Dave Carb's significant squelch. Mr. Carb is Vogue's defender of the drama. He it was who stifled a critic-heckler with:

"Waiters are the only ones who dress for their work!"

Just for the Records

The Boston papers recently chronicled a story in which the "honor of originating the ancient process of 'dunking' belongs rightly to the Dunk family of Detroit." That is, according to Herbert B. Dunk, who disputes the denial of his father of Jacksonville, Fla.

The son counters in this wise:

"I want it understood that our family descends from the Earl of Sandwich, whose name created 'sandwich,' and that the Dunks did invent dunking. It's an ancient and honorable custom, not to be repudiated through false modesty—even though a silly social rule prevents its open indulgence!"

All of which is a lot of mustache-wax! "Dunk" is a Jewish word, meaning "to dip"—dipping, "to soak"—soaking in liquid. It's grand with a hunk of coffee-cake (or a roll with butter) in good java. Ummmm!

Baled Ballots Distributed to Do Most Good

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The political campaign has now reached that stage where nobody is sure of anything.

That's because the insurgents are out to feather their nests by the old concession detour and roundabout agreements.

The midget politician who can swing twenty votes either way like monkeys on a grapevine is in his glory. He will trade them to either candidate for a harbor.

In 1928 he got his town a postoffice. Now he wants to trade for a harbor. The town doesn't need either one. But a harbor looks the prettiest.

That's what happens to many votes. You think you are dropping your guess into a ballot box. But it's only a chute. The ballots are packed in bales and distributed where they will do the most good.

We gathered our voting experience in Philadelphia in 1907 while trying to vote Democratic. The Republicans didn't count it. But they were honest about it. They returned it the next day with regrets.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Striking pictures of Mahatma Gandhi, leader of 300,000,000 of India's vast population, as he starts his fast "unto death" are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. The pictures of this remarkable little old man plainly show the emaciated state of his health. In one of the few talks ever recorded of Gandhi, he is heard describing himself as "a soldier of peace."

Gar Wood's successful attempt to bring back the speedboat title to the United States is graphically shown. Seated in his Miss America X at Algonac on Lake St. Clair, the sportsman starts on his amazing record-breaking trip at a speed of more than two miles a minute. As he crosses the line, his speed is 125 miles an hour, almost six miles faster than the previous record held by Kaye Don.

THRILLING SHAM BATTLE

United States Cavalry and Artillery men of Fort Riley, Kansas, stage a realistic sham battle and drill with many thrills. Hundreds of troops take part in the spectacular maneuvers and there are many breath-taking shots.

Leading college football teams are seen in action as they prepare for the 1932 campaign. Slow motion pictures of Columbia's squad in practice give a splendid idea of the style of this season's play. Notre Dame is seen "raring to go." Exciting moments of some of last year's games in which Notre Dame, Carnegie, Georgia and the champion Trojans took part are also presented.

Nut Football In Warner

By WILLIAM J. DAVIS

Bert Wheeler is not All-American, but is half Scotch, the other half being ginger ale, according to Robert Woolsey, as expressed in "Hold 'Em Jail," hilarity film in the Warner. The information is given in reply to a question as to Wheeler's football status after Woolsey had boasted what a bear Wheeler was on the gridiron. The boast, incidentally, is what lands them in Bidemore prison, for they are a couple of salesmen, framed by an "alumnus" of Bidemore on a hurry call from a pal inside for more football material for dear old Bidemore.

And what a nutty picture it is! Curazee, but full of laughs, and not all of them are to be credited solely to the principals, for there are other swell comics in the cast, too, including Edgar Kennedy, as the warden; Edna May Oliver, as his sister, and Roscoe Ates, a prisoner.

The highlight is a football game between Bidemore and another prison team. It's a scream, and the climax has its element of tensity, just like a game that is not a burlesque, with Wheeler staggering toward the goal line, self-drugged, and just making it with the winning touchdown, and the evidence that they had been jailed unjustly.

There is some romance, too, for Wheeler develops a crush on the Warden's daughter, played by Betty Grable.

I'M GIVING him the name Wilson in this story. He's my pal, and he has been exactly that for some seven or eight years. His real name need not be employed here, but let me assure you that you've seen him on the screen at least once. And it's even money that you've applauded him on the stage at one time or another.

Because Wilson today is one of the biggest names in the theater. A comedian of exceptional merit, he can command a terrific salary—and he does. To tell you just a bit more about his offstage personality, I don't think he has an enemy in all show business. And do you know about how many actors that can be said? Well, you can count them on one finger.

Wilson has but one trouble. He can't hold on to his money. He's unusual in that respect, because the high-salaried actor of today is generally pretty much of a tight-wad. The stage star of old tossed his money away—and when you mentioned an actor you immediately knew that the man was broke. Not so today. Far, far from it.

Your big star of the present puts his money into profitable bonds, if the term is not obsolete. He buys apartment houses and sees to it that his insurance is as large as possible. Of course, when conditions are bad, he goes the way we all must go. But given an even break, he winds up with plenty of dough.

Wilson must be a throwback to the spenders of yesterday. Because he is everything they ever hoped to be. His salary today runs anywhere from $4,000 to $6,000 a week. He works like the very devil for his money, never shirks during a performance, never drinks to excess, and can be counted upon to please his public at all times. With him, then it's far from a case of easy come, easy go.

Wilson has tried to save his money. I know he has, because we've discussed the situation time and time again. But when he manages to get together some $20,000 at one time, something always happens. A girl. An unfortunate investment. A gambling splurge. Almost anything. And overnight he's broke again.

The man really wants to save. No question about that. He knows full well that the public is plenty fickle. He knows that, with one or two bad breaks, his salary can dwindle from $5,000 to $500—and from $500 to $50. He knows all about the derelicts of show business because he has tossed away small fortunes trying to help some of them.

Why then doesn't he compel himself to save? I'm afraid the question is too much for me. It seems as though he just can't—and the wisest man in the world couldn't supply a more satisfying answer.

He earns—and he spends. Each week, he determines to start saving. But each week something comes up that stops him until the following week. And so the years roll on . . .

A few nights ago, Wilson arrived in New York for the first time in several months. He had just completed a new picture in Hollywood and had hastened back for a short visit to the Broadway he loves so dearly. He found me at a corner table in Moore's restaurant, where I had been sitting for several days.

We shook hands warmly and spoke of the customary things. I told him what was new on Broadway and he told me what was new in Hollywood. In other words, we spoke of nothing at all.

Suddenly my pal switched the conversation. He looked at me very seriously.

"Mark," he said, "I've got the biggest news in the world for you. You'll be tickled to death to hear it."

"Let me make a guess," I observed, "You're in love again."

He shook his head.

"No," he asserted. "I said that this was big news. I've found a way to save my money!"

It was my turn to grow serious.

"If you mean it," I said, "I'm very happy. But I'll tell you frankly that I can hardly believe it."

"I can't blame you," he returned. "After all, you've heard me say the same thing any number of times. We've sat together and kidded about it until we both grew slightly dizzy. But we never hit any definite conclusion.

"I want to tell you, Mark, that I've been a complete fool. I didn't know how daffy I was until I awakened one morning to discover that I had less than $500 in the bank. Less than $500 after I had been making all this dough for so long a time!

"But now everything is different. There's been the biggest change in my life since I stumbled on the one way that a boob like myself could make himself save money. I've got confidence now; confidence that I will be protected in my old age. And, boy, what a swell feeling that is!"

I leaned back in my chair.

"So far, sweet guy," I stated, "you have told me nothing. I'm glad to see you so enthused—but might I ask what this big thing is?"

Wilson rubbed his hands.

"Annuity!" he exclaimed proudly. "That's my plan—and may God bless it! The minute I get $5,000—boom, it goes into my annuity policies. When I was first told about it I couldn't believe it. But when they convinced me, I went crazy about the idea.

"Imagine, Mark. If things go as they are now I'll be drawing $1,000 a month when I'm 50 years of age. No work. Nothing. I just sit back, enjoy myself—and collect. I'm the happiest—"

"Just a minute, my boy," I interrupted. "You seem to forget that I know you. Annuity is a swell form of insurance. A normal guy can't go wrong with it. But who told you that you were normal?

"Want to know what you'll be doing? You'll be drawing your policies before you know it. Before you ever get a chance to cash your policies, you'll have borrowed so much that they won't be worth a great deal."

He waved a hand.

"Ah," he cried excitedly, "that's where you're wrong. My annuity policies are irrevocable! When I put my thousands into those policies, I sign them away automatically. Regardless of what happens, I can't touch the money. That's what makes it so great.

"And now what? Happiness. Security. Peace. I can look into the future with a sense of satisfaction. It's costing me a lot of money right now, of course, but I wouldn't have it anyway. And it's a new sensation for me to realize that I have all that money placed in a spot where I can touch it."

The man's enthusiasm was contagious. I smiled.

"It sounds great, boy," I observed. "How much money have you saved already?"

His face clouded for an instant. He shook his head.

"Nothing yet," he murmured. "But I'm gonna start next month!" . . .

Del Rio, Joel McCrea in Stanley

By EDWARD W. GOSS

"Bird of Paradise" should do well by the Stanley. It possesses the attributes of a box office success—brilliant romance, heart tugs and not a few thrills.

Fitting into all this is Dolores Del Rio against a South Seas background. Apparently Dolores and tropical settings were made for each other.

The picture depicts weird savage superstitions and a story of a love two races tabu. Things begin when a little boat attempts to gain the safety of a lagoon after being battered about in a storm. It is here the action leaves the civilization of the Western world and dips into the romance of a white man (Joel McCrea) and a native girl (Dolores Del Rio) who saved his life. The white man is bent on classifying the romance as just another affair to be forgotten when convenient, but he gets himself hog-tied in an enduring affection.

He steals the girl away from her folks and transports her to one of the swellest little nests ever conceived by makers of movies. The nest is an island sanctuary. Superstition says invasion of the island is prohibited, but that makes no difference to the lovers and they have a great holiday.

The island Utopia doesn't last forever. A volcano erupts. Thrill scenes follow when the boy rushes to save his woman. The action is quickened still more when natives decide to sacrifice both of them in the volcano. Suspense is cleverly carried to an excellent fadeout.

English Players Sign For New Talkie

Claude King, one of England's best known stage artists; Jameson Thomas, another English stage actor who years ago introduced "The Squaw Man" to London audiences, and Gertrude Norman, a third Britisher, who during the last 20 years has played mother and grandmother roles in hundreds of motion pictures, have been signed for supporting roles in "The Bookworm Turns." They will join a cast headed by Stuart Erwin, Alison Spikworth, Susan Fleming and Gordon Westcott.

LAYDENS THREATEN TROUBLE FOR PITT

DUQUESNE UNIVERSITY never has known a prouder moment in football than she enjoyed last night, when Red Sullivan's field goal late in the final quarter broke up a scoreless tie and gave the Bluffites their first victory over the powerful forces of West Virginia University. A tie would have been a moral triumph for the Dukes, and an actual win over a school that always had been rated in a pigskin class higher than that of the Red and Blue represents the biggest thing yet accomplished in the remarkable advance made under the coaching of Elmer Layden.

Elmer Layden

A scoreless deadlock with Carnegie Tech last fall, and now a clean-cut victory over the strong Mountaineers would appear to leave no room for doubt that Duquesne has landed in big time football on both feet and is going to stay there. It may not be healthy for Pitt to take anything for granted in connection with that tilt at the Stadium two weeks from today. It's a pretty safe bet that the Dukes will unbottle more of an attack in that game than they have yet shown, and with an improved offensive added to the unquestionably strong defense, there is plenty of trouble in store for the Panthers.

BOB QUINN, president of the Red Sox, says he will be the most surprised man in the world if the Yankees do not beat the Cubs. He admits the Chicago club has good pitchers, but he can't figure how the Bruins are going to be able to drive in runs.

"I consider Bush, Root and Malone fair pitchers," said Quinn without touching on Warneke, "but they do not impress me as men who can go more than seven innings against heavy pressure, and the Yankee batters will provide that heavy pressure. Stephenson is a good hitter in the pinches and can drive that ball. Cuyler also does it once in a while, but where else are you going to look for your hitting strength on the Cubs?"

THERE IS THE usual division of major league men on the outcome of the world series. Quinn is like all other American Leaguers in picking the Yanks as sure winners. National Leaguers will tell you the Cubs have a good chance.

It's like that every year. Each club owner or manager picks the team representing his own league to win the big series. In many cases the prophets believe they must do it out of loyalty, or they're allowing their judgment to be swayed by sentiment. They make their series predictions with their hearts instead of with their heads.

CLASSMATES IN THEIR college days, members of the same club later in the professional baseball ranks, and almost lifetime buddies, Riggs Stephenson and Joe Sewell will be foes in the world series. The diamond classic has seen more unique rivalries, notably when Doc and Jimmy Johnston, brothers, clashed as members of the Indians and Dodgers in 1920, and when Bob and Irish Meusel, also brothers, were opponents in the Yankee-Giant series of 1921-22-23. Still, the spectacle of the two old pals opposing each other, after fighting side by side during a long stretch of their athletic careers, will add a striking sidelight to this year's derby drama.*

Joe Sewell

SEWELL AND STEPHENSON, both natives of Alabama, attended the University of Alabama at the same time and played together on the college football and baseball teams until 1918. At that time Stephenson played second base and Sewell third.

When Ray Chapman, Cleveland shortstop, died on August 17, 1920, after being hit on the head the preceding day by one of Carl Mays' pitches, Sewell was brought up from New Orleans to fill the hole in the Indian lineup. The following year Stevie also joined the Cleveland club, and the two were teammates again until 1925.

BOTH WERE COMEBACKS this year. Sewell, figured as about done, played a surprisingly strong part in the pennant victory of the Yanks, and Stephenson, tipped to collapse in midseason from wobbly legs, went right through the campaign as the Cubs' most dependable hitter in the pinches.

Sewell still is conceded to have the best eye in baseball, and to be the hardest man in the game to strike out. He has been fanned only three times all season—by Wes Ferrell, Elon Hogsett and Walter Stewart—and on but one of the three occasions did he swing at the third strike. In his 1,763 major league games in 13 seasons he has struck out only 110 times.

FOOTBALL ALMOST KEPT Eddie Tolan from becoming a world champion sprinter. While a gridder at Cass Tech High School in Detroit he suffered a severe knee injury and he says that but for a surgical miracle he never would have been able to walk again without a limp, much less run. And then, when he entered Michigan another turn of the fates saved him for sprint glory. Eddie had set his heart on succeeding Benny Friedman as quarterback on the varsity football team. He reported for the freshman eleven and quarterbacked the yearlings for two days, but on the third day he was lifted. The coaches decided he should not be allowed to play football. They handed him a track suit instead, and thereby saved a world-beating sprinter of the future from being lost in obscurity as an ordinary football player.

OUT OF RESPECT to the memory of Connie Murphy, the former Fordham football star who died as a result of injuries received last season, the numbers "1" and "33" have been omitted from the list to be worn this fall by the Ram players

Last year "33" was Connie's regular number. After his death, he was elected captain as a tribute to his memory, and as "1" would have been his number in that capacity it has been withdrawn also. A different Fordham captain will be appointed for each game.

CAN YOU IMAGINE John L. Sullivan, or Kid Lavigne, or Young Griffo, or Joe Walcott, or any other fighter of bygone hard-boiled fistic eras, playing tennis as part of a training program? Well, it has come to just that in the modern boxing game, and if it spreads to become general, the credit or the blame must go to Max Schmeling.

Max Schmeling

Eugene Criqui, the Frenchman, who won the featherweight title from Johnny Kilbane and quickly lost it to Johnny Dundee, was the only previous top-notch battler Eastern critics can recall who included tennis in his ring preparations. But Schmeling has gone in for it strongly, and has played several sets every day while getting into shape for next Monday night's tilt with Mickey Walker.

SOME OF THE moderns share Schmeling's belief that the racquet sport is of real benefit to a boxer in strengthening the legs and helping the wind. Others can't see it. Among the latter is Lou Fink, who used to train Gene Tunney and now does the same for Tony Canzoneri. "I think playing tennis is bad for a fighter," he said. "It develops muscles that do not aid a boxer, and always there is the danger of straining a ligament, sinew or muscle. I think it is particularly bad for a fighter shortly after he has eaten. Schmeling plays after dinner. He should be relaxing then, instead of taking such violent exercise. And they tell me that after working up a heavy perspiration playing tennis, Max does not cool out and take a shower, but lets it dry on him. I don't see how he keeps from getting a cold or binding his muscles."

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24.—Now that Paul Waner has established a new National League record for two-base hits, the Pirates have little more than the gong to wait for after the long National League campaign. The Buccos and Cardinals are slated to clash in a single contest this afternoon. They will bring the race to a close tomorrow with a doubleheader. Larry French will oppose Tex Carleton in the contest of today.

The elder Waner cracked out his sixtieth double of the season yesterday as his club was defeated by the Redbirds, 8-4. The extra-base hit off Paul's bat surpassed the mark owned by Chuck Klein, of the Phillies.

P. WANER SETS RECORD

The double came in the sixth inning, but Paul was not through for the day. In the ninth he came to the plate again and once more connected for a two-sacker to boost his record output to 61. Earl Webb, of the Boston Red Sox, owns the major league mark which is 67.

Manager Gibson had many youngsters in the contest dropped to the Cards. Gabby Street also favored kids in the unimportant game and this policy is likely to be pursued by both pilots until the season closes. The few remaining games gives the opposing leaders a chance to get a line on their rookies and there is no better way to judge them than when they are under real fire.

Leon Chagnon tried to take the Redbirds yesterday, but the home

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: AN UNCROSSED ARTERY—Market street, the "Main street" of San Francisco, is unique in that no street actually crosses it between Church street, near the hills, and the famous Ferry Building on the bay. It marks a sharp division in the planning of the other streets. On one side of Market the side streets branch off at various angles, while on the other they branch directly at right angles, but no street runs across it for a distance of about four miles, practically its entire length. THE OLDEST WOODEN BOX—In August, 1931, when workmen were excavating for the new subway at Eighth and Locust streets, Philadelphia, the remains of a remarkably old cypress forest were encountered at a depth of about 60 feet. The forest grew before the Third Glacial Period, about 100,000 years ago, in the days of the extinct mammoth. Identification of the kind and age of wood has been made by the National Museum of Washington and the Academy of Natural Science in Philadelphia. The box I illustrated was fashioned from this fossil wood. It is the property of J. W. Keller, of Philadelphia, who is donating a duplicate to the Believe It or Not Odditorium in New York City. EAR-WALKERS—The acoustic organ of the Acridiid grasshopper is situated a little over the articulation of the hind leg, very close to the spot where the insect's sound organ is located. The ear, which resembles the human ear in shape, is very delicately attuned to vibrations. THE 100,000-MILE TIRES—A few years ago the Merchants Biscuit Company, of Denver, Col., purchased a dual-drive delivery truck equipped with six standard automobile tires, and, when the truck was sold recently, it still had the original tires, although the speedometer reading was 100,928 miles. In all of that distance the driver, Wendell F. Ellsworth, never had to change a tire on the road and only minor shop repairs were made.

HARVARD CUP FINAL TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Ralph Bald, Mount Lebanon ace and holder of the Western Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh center junior championships, battles Robert Madden, Schenley youth and possessor of the West Penn and Pittsburgh Center boys' crowns, in the final combat of the tenth annual Harvard Cup interscholastic net title tourney on the P. A. A. gallery court, Bigelow boulevard at Ruskin avenue, at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Bald, seeded first in the current milling, yesterday nosed out his teammate, Henry Ackerman, third on the list and 1930 winner of the Crimson flagon, 6-3, 9-7, 7-9, 10-8, in semi-final fray at the University Club, while Madden, rated second, eliminated Bob Burnett, Wilkinsburg hope and fourth of the select quartet, 7-5, 6-4, 6-1.

Rain interrupted the penultimate contesting on Thursday as Bald led Ackerman, 6-3, 9-7, 3-3, and Madden enjoyed 7-5, 3-2 advantage over Burnett.

Dukes Record Initial Win Over West Va.

To many of the sons of old West Virginia, the Mountaineers opened and closed their 1932 gridiron campaign in last night's tussle with the Duquesne University Night Riders. Before a turnout of more than 25,000, the Riders punched out a 3-to-0 triumph over the Morgantown invaders in a nip and tuck struggle. The defeat was as bitter a pill for the West Virginians to swallow as it was sweet to the followers of Duquesne. And never has Duquesne tasted a sweeter morsel.

Little Larry Sullivan, Duquesne's diminutive quarterback, diminutive in stature, but mountainous in heart, stood cool as a cucumber on the West Virginia 18-yard stripe in the final period, and with Halfback Al DeLuca holding the ball, booted it squarely between the uprights for a field goal. Even had he missed this shot, Sullivan would have shared the hero honors of the contest with his left guard, Nick DeCarbo. The pair reacted to the importance of the occasion with a set of sterling defensive performances.

DUKES COME THROUGH

The contest, regarded generally as a tossup prior to the start of hostilities, though from here, the Dukes looked like the best bet, was hard, but not cleverly, fought. Both elevens booted their big scoring opportunities in a shameful manner. Of the two, the Dukes played the smarter football and deserved the triumph. It was Duquesne's first victory in five starts against West Virginia, although the locals secured a tie two years ago.

A 51-yard quick kick in the first period by Fullback Zaninelli, which caught the Mountaineer secondary defense doing a Rip Van Winkle, set the Mountaineers with their backs to the wall for the greater portion of the first half.

MACKS CLINCH SECOND PLACE

Associated Press.

Four straight pennants proved too big an assignment for the Philadelphia Athletics, but Connie Mack's great team has done the next best thing by nailing down second place in the American League.

Needing only one victory over Washington to clinch the "almost" honors, the A's went out and got it by pounding three Senator pitchers for an 8-to-4 win yesterday.

Miss Wall Loses In Canadian Play

MONTREAL, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—The last of the United States challengers for the Canadian women's open golf championship disappeared from the tournament yesterday with the defeat of Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis.

Miss Wall, the lone survivor of six United States women that started play for the title vacated by Maureen Orcutt, went down before the steady playing of Margery Kirkham, of Montreal, runner-up last year. The score was 4 and 2.

The other finalist berth went to Mrs. Charles S. Eddis, of Toronto. She eliminated Doris Taylor, young Kanawaki star, 2 up, after gaining a one-hole lead on the first nine.

MISS TROUTMAN WINS

Miss Violet Troutman won the Pittsburgh Country Club golf championship for women yesterday when she defeated Mrs. J. E. Jackson, 4 and 2, in the final round of the annual club tournament.

the tutelage of Bill Amos, former Wash-Jeff star and coach, taking on a tough opening day foe in the Glenville (W. Va.) Teachers. Thiel's Lutherans engage another West Virginia eleven in Morris-Harvey and Westminster and Slippery Rock battle at New Wilmington. St. Vincent has a practice tussle booked at Latrobe with Westinghouse Tech.

New River State's Golden Bears with the most promising squad in history, figures to make the going tough for Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass., and Piedmont University invades Huntington, W. Va., to tie into Marshall College's Thundering Herd.

The folks who wend their way into the Stadium will attend mostly for the purpose of looking over Dr. Jock Sutherland's new line creation, a brand new affair this year. Last year's great forward wall, conceded to be the most powerful in the East, was a three-year affair and consequently, Sutherland was forced to construct a new one. He has done just that, and has built a good one, too, but Ohio Northern hardly figures to possess the class to furnish it a very stiff test.

LINEUP UNCERTAIN

Coach Sutherland is not entirely satisfied in his own mind just how his starting eleven will line up. Ted Dailey and Muggsy Sikadany figure to go at the ends, Paul Cuba and Bob Hoel are the likely tackle bets and Doc Hartwig and Cheese Onder probably will pair off at the guards. Joe Tormey is set at center.

The backfield will have bulky Bobby Hogan at quarter and Capt. Paul (Bulldog) Reider at right half. Mike Nicksick likely will fill in for Warren Heller, sensational left halfbacker, today, as Heller has a slight ankle injury that Dr. Sutherland does not want to aggravate. Either Heinie Weisenbaugh or Izzy Weinstock will start at fullback. John Luch hasn't recovered his full strength since his appendicitis attack and will rest today.

The Ohio Northern hopefuls, who lost two games last year, one to the Army and the other to Otterbein, are the "x" quantity in the equation. The team worked out here yesterday, looked light and not particularly fast.

The kickoff is scheduled for 2 o'clock.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist

Says:

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—Well, folks, the big league season is so close to its end the pall bearers are already putting on their gloves. And that battalion of experts who told you last spring that the A's and Cards would repeat will soon be all set to tell you Norman Thomas will lick Hoover and Roosevelt, the St. Olaf eleven will crush Notre Dame, and U. S. Steel will run up to 258.

Nick Altrock

Some day I'd like to find a baseball tipster that I can love in October as I do in May.

Ho-hum. A year ago the Cards returned to St. Louis and ran up against the greatest reception since Lindy dropped into town. This week when they went back to the home bailiwick, they were lucky if the red caps met them at the station. It's a great life if you don't weaken, but the Cards wobbled a little too much.

CUBS' INFIELD INFERIOR TO THAT OF YANKEES—RUTH

BABE CONCEDES BRUINS EDGE INFIELDING

By BABE RUTH
Baseball's Richest Salaried Player.

In my second article on the world series teams I am going to consider the two infields, and when it comes to anything bordering on a comparison I must admit that I am under something of a handicap. In the first place, I see so much of the Yankees and so little of the Cubs that I am offering my own opinions of one group against the views which other persons, who probably see little or nothing of the Yankees, have formed concerning the Cubs.

I hope to make these comparisons more along general lines than in an individual way. I will take the Yankee quartet and utility players as one group and the Cubs as another.

From a fielding standpoint I gather from the evidence at hand that the Chicago infield has an edge on the Yankees. From the standpoint of hitting, the New York quartet takes the honors. I realize that Mark Koenig's current batting mark appears to give the Cubs a decided edge in hitting, but even Mark himself would not lay claim to distinction as a .365 hitter over a season's play. It is hardly fair to compare an average covering most of the season with one of about 30 games.

Lou Gehrig is the most powerful hitter and run maker in the group, and I think Tony Lazzeri, on his performances this year in long hitting and in driving in runs, is second to Gehrig in this particular. On the other hand, they tell me that Billy Herman, of the Cubs, is the most brilliant of the fielders who figure in any infield comparison, and that Charley Grimm, while not as agile as in other years, is still a master around first base.

SEWELL PRAISED

I notice that both teams are carrying more all-around strength on the right side of the infield than on the leftfield side. The lighter hitters are to be found over there. They tell me that Woody English is a very good third baseman, and he undoubtedly carries more speed than Joey Sewell. That is to be expected, because there is more than eight years' difference in their ages. Yet Sewell has done a marvelous bit of third-basing for the Yankees this year, and he has played a big part in the success of the team.

At the plate Sewell must get the edge over his younger opponent. Joey has the keenest eye in baseball, and he is the most difficult player in our league to strike out. I guess you could say the most difficult in the two major leagues. He has fanned only twice all season, once at home and once on the road.

Shortstop offers something of a problem. It looks as if Koenig will play the position for the Cubs, and Mark is easily the best hitter among the shortstops. On what we knew of Koenig I would not rate him above Crosetti, in a defensive way, except in a more powerful arm to make up for a fumble. They tell me that Jurges is a better fielder than Koenig. But it is possible that Mark has overcome some of the erratic tendencies which marked his fielding when he was in our league.

YANKS RATED BEST

Each team has two utility infielders and none is likely to see much service unless some accident occurs. All four have been light hitters this season, and there is no reason to accord either team an advantage in the utility department.

Taking the infields as groups I would be inclined to rate the Yankees as stronger in all around play. The difference is explained in the more powerful hitting of Gehrig and Lazzeri, who have combined to pole about 25 triples and 50 home runs during the regular season. The four Yankee regulars have hit about 35 triples and 65 homers, which figures place them far ahead of the entire Cub group in long hitting. As I said before, the Cubs appear to have the edge in fielding ability, but not enough to offset that greater power which the New York infielders have on the attack.

Bottomley Seeks To Pilot Redlegs

CINCINNATI, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—The Enquirer says that Jim Bottomley, of the St. Louis Cardinals, has applied for the managership of the Cincinnati Reds.

Although under contract to the Cards, Bottomley came here yesterday at the suggestion of Sam Breadon, president, and Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis club, says the Enquirer.

Bottomley conferred for some time with Sidney Weil, president of the Reds, and Weil promised him a decision within three weeks.

World Series Rivals No.6—General Sum-Up

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The importance attached to the winning of the first game of any world series appears to be justified. The old saw about a good start being half the battle appears to be borne out in the short competition which determines who shall be adorned with the biggest honors of the diamond sport.

Charley Ruffing

Guy Bush

So when the New York Yankees and Chicago Cubs pair off at the Yankee Stadium next Wednesday afternoon, the desire to cop the initial fight will be rampant in the breasts of the opposing managers and their players. When the contest is ended, the defeated athletes probably will say, as has been said before:

"We'll win the next one; we're as good as they are."

This is the right spirit, but the facts show that the club annexing victory at the start holds an important advantage.

In the 28 years of world series competition, or since it was inaugurated by the Pirates and Boston Red Sox in 1903, 18 clubs triumphant in the opening game rode on to ultimate success. In other words, it's a two-to-one shot in favor of the winning club, if you wish to speak in the language of chance.

BUSH WISE CHOICE

Charley Grimm and Joe McCarthy, respective managers in the impending fights, are not different from the directors who have preceded them as they view the winning of the first fight. Grimm already has announced that Guy (Abe) Bush will be on the mound for the National League champions. Boss McCarthy, it is reported, will start with Charley Ruffing, who, like Bush, is a right-hander.

Bush, after all angles are pondered, is the best choice for Grimm. Guy probably does not have as much speed as Lonnie Warneke, the new Cub sensation, but the more experienced pitcher owns many of the qualifications that go with world series play. It was Mississippi Abe who pitched the Bears to their only success over the Athletics in 1929, and it was the same tall hurler who bore the brunt of this year's pennant-winning burden after the Cubs had reached a level with the Buccos.

RUFFING A GIANT

Grimm's veteran ace has lots of speed; a good curve, a change of pace and plenty of courage. He is still a young man, not having reached his thirtieth birthday. That he will justify his manager's selection is the opinion of National League fans.

Ruffing, about one year younger than Bush, is one of the game's biggest pitchers. Charley tips the beam beyond the 200-mark. The Yankee hurler was not a star as he toiled for the lowly Red Sox, but when he reached the high-class club he immediately began to perform like a champion. Ruffing has kept the pace of Lefty Gomez and Johnny Allen, two kids who would relish the slab slip in the first game, but who probably will be asked to step aside for the seasoned right-hander.

BIG CHANCE FOR CUBS

Should Bush down Gehrig, Ruth & Co. in the inaugural, the bells of Chicago would peal forth in joyous notes and the steamboats on Lake Michigan would make "whoopee." The effect of a victory of this sort would work some magic to the interest of the senior league. In the first place, it would show that the National League has at least one pitcher who can slow down the great batters, and the general effect surely would be gratifying to John Heydler and his backers.

The Bruins will go into battle under the rating of a club owning great pitchers, but one that does not own a championship punch from day to day. So if Ruffing would dull the Chicago attack the reaction would not be similar to the backfire of a collapse of the famed Yankee offensive.

In this particular series, therefore, the winning of the important first game would have a double significance—if the Cubs are the victors.

THE END.

GROVE TO BOX RUDY

Davy Grove, of the North Side, and Young Rudy, of Charleroi, welterweights, will box the eight-round semi-final to the Battling Gizzy-Joe Marcus bout at the opening show of the new Kapphan Arena, on the North Side, next Friday night. Matchmaker Lew Raymond announced today.

FRENCH READY FOR CARDS

boys were a bit too tough. Paul Derringer pitched runless ball against the Buccos until the seventh, when he weakened to the extent of allowing four runs. But the markers didn't mean much in view of the five runs the Cards had garnered up to this time. The Redbirds made the game safe in their half of the seventh by scoring three counters.

Jimmy Reese, the Cardinal second baseman, delivered a bold stroke for the home club in the fifth when he clouted a homer with Derringer on base.

Lookouts Take Lead In Dixie Series

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 24.—(AP.)—Snapping out of the hypnotic spell in which Schoolboy Rowe had held them for eight innings, the Chattanooga Lookouts slammed their way to a 3-to-2 victory over the Beaumont Exporters in the ninth inning yesterday and took the lead in the Dixie series, two games to one.

Up until the eighth it had been a brilliant pitching duel between Rowe and Leon Pettitt, of the Southern Association champions.

ALL-STARS BOW TO CRAWFORDS

By TOM BIRKS

The Minor League All-Stars and Pittsburgh Crawfords are primed to resume their three-game series at Greenlee Field today with afternoon and night contests on the bill. The Crawfords got away to a flying start yesterday afternoon, taking the opening contest of the series, 11 to 4.

Elmer Knetzer will oppose the Crawfords in the afternoon tussle today with Frank Roscoe primed to battle the local Negro stars in the night engagement.

The All-Stars got away to a good start yesterday when they touched Kincanon for three runs in the opening frame. A triple by Ollie Carnegie and a home run by George Tice featured the attack.

Joe Semler, however, was not able to hold the advantage, and the Crawfords nibbled away at the lead. Semler issued two passes in the first inning and both men scored. Charleston came up with a runner on base and hit a home run into the right field stands. The clout won the ball game.

D.-E. Eleven Loses To Geneva, 21-6

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Sept. 24.—Geneva College's Covenanter football team started off on the right foot on its 1932 gridiron campaign by defeating Davis-Elkins here last night, 21 to 6.

The Covenanters, led by the crack combination of Cliff Aultman and Art Grahame, scored in each of the first three periods. Davis-Elkins tallied in the third. Grahame scored two of the three touchdowns, twice crashing over on line bucks. He hurled a pass to Begolly for the third tally. Tinney scored for Davis-Elkins.

SOCCER RACES OPEN TODAY

The Central Soccer League swings into action this afternoon with four games in the schedule. Seven well balanced clubs are primed to open the fight for the crown now worn by the Union Switch and Signal eleven.

The defending champions play at Lawrenceville against the strip aggregation, composed of former Rover and Celtic stars. At Swissvale, Clan Douglas and Westinghouse come to grips. Mt. Lebanon and Ambridge clash at the bridge works grounds at Ambridge, and the German Sport Club tangles with National Tube at McKeesport.

In the Panhandle League, Primrose travels to Houston and the J. J. Veronas meet Beadling on the latter's grounds.

WHITAKER SET FOR CLEVELAND

DAYTON, O., Sept. 24.—The Whitaker nine, of Pittsburgh, faces Cleveland in the semi-final round of the annual National Baseball Federation's championship tournament here today.

Whitaker, unbeaten up until yesterday, was toppled from its perch by Detroit, the Michigan team scoring a 10-to-8 triumph, staging a three-run rally in the eighth inning to pass the Pittsburghers. Whitaker had rushed five runs across in the seventh inning to move out in front after Detroit had taken an early four-run lead.

W. VA. BOWS TO DUKES

ond period and the Mountaineers made their first big scoring bid. Harry Marker broke through the right side of the Duquesne line for a 30-yard chase. Parriott, subbing at halfback for Canich, completed three passes in a row, one to Sortet, good for 17 yards; one to Eck Allen, good for five and another to Goodwin for 15, making it first down on the five-yard mark. Here Allen became mixed up on his time, and on first down, passed over the goal line.

DUKES GET BREAK

The Dukes got a big break on the kickoff at the start of the third period when Zaninelli recovered Parriott's fumble on the West Virginia 37-yard mark. Jim McDonald raced around end for seven yards and he and Zaninelli and Pawlina advanced the ball to the 28, where it was lost on downs. The teams exchanged punts and West Virginia, taking the ball on its own 26-yard mark, opened up with a mixture of running plays and passes that advanced the ball steadily down the field to Duquesne's 12-yard marker. The Red and Blue braced and finally, Parriott grounded a pass, and Duquesne took the ball on downs.

West Virginia had obtained the ball the same way midway in the final period, when Sullivan took the winning of the game into his own hands. He leaped high into the air to intercept one of Parriott's passes and chased back with it 34 yards to the Mountaineer 18. After two line plays and a pass had failed, Sullivan made his field goal.

The game, apparently, was "in," but West Virginia made a dying effort to score, and very nearly crashed through, too. They obtained possession of the ball when Zaninelli got off his only really poor punt of the day, on the Duquesne 35. Scott, a substitute back, heaved a long pass to Wilson, good for 24 yards and a first down on the Duquesne 11, but once more a Mountaineer pass sailed harmlessly over the goal.

Goodwin, West Virginia's right end; Allen, sophomore quarterback and Schwartzwalder, who replaced Wright at center, played plucky ball. Allen turned out to be the heavy man of the West Virginia attack. Parsy Slate, highly touted Mountaineer fullback, failed to cause any of the attendant Pitt coaches and scouts to shed tears because he departed so suddenly from Pitt's camp at Windber last fall. He wasn't in there very long.—JESS CARVER.

STEEL INQUIRY AND ORDERS GAINING

By B. E. V. LUTY

There has been a small increase in the volume of steel buying in the past week, and a more marked improvement in the general tone of the steel market.

Ingot production this week was at about 16 per cent of total capacity against 15 per cent estimated for each of the last two weeks and 14 per cent in the latter part of August, the low point.

The decided improvement in the tone of the market lay in the wider distribution of orders received and in increased inquiry, the latter indicating that many buyers are now looking ahead.

An important feature of the improvement is that it appears to be more of general than of seasonal character. A mere seasonal improvement would play out towards the end of the year while general improvement would presumably be continuous. Precedents, as of 1922 and 1924, indicate that when steel is recovering from depression it shows improvement even in December, riding over the usual dull spell.

ACTUAL BUYING GAINS

In actual buying distinct increases are observed in tubular goods, sheets and tin plate. The increase in tin plate in only temporary, being contrary to usual seasonal trend, and is due to can makers having been too conservative whereby they have been running out of stocks.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has been accorded a $2,000,000 loan by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and will build 1,285 freight cars at its Altoona shops, requiring 20,000 tons or more of steel. A few small applications for loans to build or repair rolling stock have been made to the R. F. C. In general the railroads will await a marked upturn in traffic, whereupon a substantial volume of business is expected.

There are ups and downs in production by the various automobile makers and it is estimated that requirements in the remainder of the year will approximate the recent rate, which has been slightly above that of August. After the turn of the year much more demand is expected.

SCRAP MARKET FIRM

The nature of the picking up in steel demand is becoming more clearly defined and is in accordance with expectations. There has been a slow increase in jobber buying of steel products for several weeks and there are clearer indications that manufacturing and mining interests are becoming more disposed to repair idle equipment. The large specific industries, building, railroading, automobile and oil and gas, were expected to pick up more slowly.

The heavy melting steel scrap market had a sharp rise in prices during August, due to scarcity, as consumer buying was very limited. Lately there has been a much larger turnover, with prices somewhat stiffer.

Finished steel prices have been continued for fourth quarter all around, except for some slight modifications in some descriptions of sheets.

TEXTILE MILLS SPEED UP

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(AP.)—The Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly industrial review, said increased activity at textile mills in August sent upward the volume of industrial production considerably more than the usual amount.

Wholesale prices advanced during August, and the general level prevailing in the first three weeks of September was higher than in recent months, while employment at factories increased slightly more than usual. The board said the industrial output increase in August was 2 per cent of the 1923-25 average.

The board found that the employment increase was brought about by large additions to working forces in textile, clothing and leather industries, while in the automobile, tire and machinery industries and at car building shops the number employed decreased further. Aggregate wage payments, it said, increased less than seasonally.

The board said building contracts awarded up to September 15 indicated that for the third quarter of the year the value would be about the same as for the second quarter whereas usually they were smaller.

CARRIERS LEAD QUIET STOCK ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP.) — Under leadership of the rails, stocks pushed forward in early trading today, although volume was rather light.

Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio, New York Central, New Haven, Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley were up a point or so. Similar gains were made by Union Pacific and Santa Fe. Norfolk and Western jumped 5. Mack Truck featured the motor group, gaining 3 points to a new 1932 high. American Telephone, Allied Chemical and Corn Products were up a point. Peoples Gas and J. I. Case advanced 2. United States Steel and American Can were fractionally higher.

The eastern railroad consolidation agreement was enthusiastically received by Wall street commentators. Principal benefits expected to arise from final consummation of a four-system plan are numerous. Economy in operation is one, speeding of similar consolidation plans in other parts of the country is another; and, not least important, is the progress that has been made in solving a problem which has bothered railroad men for 12 years.

The Federal Reserve Board's review of business conditions also furnished ammunition for those who insist that business conditions have definitely turned for the better. The summary marked the first time in many months that the reserve board was able to report an actual improvement of more than seasonal proportions in industrial conditions. While the steel, automobile and lumber industries still lagged, there was enough pick-up in other lines to register an increase in the reserve board's index. It stood at 60 on August 31 against 58 the month before.

The dollar was firm at the opening of foreign exchange dealings, British sterling losing 1-16 cent to $3.46⅝ for cables and French francs reacting 1-16 point.

COTTON PRICES RULE STEADY

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Cotton futures opened steady, 3 lower to 1 higher on southern selling and a fairly good foreign demand. October, 7.18; December, 7.30; January, 7.35; March, 7.41; May, 7.51; July, 7.62.

Southern selling continued after the call, but moderate offerings were sufficiently well taken by covering or trade buying to hold prices steady after the call. December worked up from 7.29 to 7.34 and active months generally showed net advances of 3 to 4 points at the end of the first half hour.

Cotton on shipboard at United States ports at the end of the week was estimated at 139,000 bales, against 81,000 last year and 148,000 two years ago.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 24. — Cotton — Receipts 4,000 bales; American nil. Spot moderate business done; prices 13 points lower. Quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 6.54; good middling, 6.29; strict middling, 6.09; middling, 5.94; strict low middling, 5.84; low middling, 5.74; strict good ordinary, 5.54; good ordinary, 5.24. Futures closed quiet. October, 5.67; December, 5.64; January, 5.65; March, 5.67; May, 5.70; July, 5.72.

CAR LOADINGS UP 85,478

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Loadings of revenue freight in the week ended September 17 totaled 587,302 cars. This is an increase of 85,478 cars over the week preceding, but 155,312 below the like 1931 week, according to the American Railway Association.

WALL STREET HEARS

That United States Steel will show a sizable increase in unfilled orders for September.

That rates on the forthcoming treasury issue may set a new low record.

That the railroads so far have made little tangible inquiry for new equipment.

That American Can is not likely to declare an extra dividend at next week's meeting, but will pay the regular.

VALENTINE

:-: Captivating Story of a Shy Girl Rushed Into Love :-:

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXX.

All Val's returning happiness vanished into thin air. The dinner that would have been a success in spite of everything was going to be spoiled because Pearl Neely had come early. And now she was clamoring to get into the kitchen. Just the one place to keep her out of! Well, Val would settle that:

"There isn't a thing to do," she said firmly. "We'll just go into the living room. Joe will be back in a minute."

She led the way, trying to look gracious and friendly, and at the same time put Miss Neely in her place.

But her too-much-at-home guest wasn't to be disposed of that easily.

"Heavens!" she cried. "What did I come early for? Oh, it's right off the hall, isn't it? Joe and I looked at so many apartments I'd forgotten. Phew! Something's burning . . . oh, you poor child! You have spoiled your first dinner party, what a tragedy! But we'll fix it all up, don't you worry! Just sit down and relax. I'll salvage SOMETHING!"

Val said, "Joe's gone for chops and ice cream."

"Chops and ice cream! If that isn't like Joey! Bless his infant heart. He WOULD think of chops and ice cream. Never mind, I'll manage something. Got any canned corn? Milk? That's it. We'll have cream of corn soup and let me see . . . how would you like a sardine canape to start with?"

"I've got the fruit cocktails all fixed, and that's the soup—turtle soup."

BECOMES INDIFFERENT

"Fruit cocktails! So you have. Mm . . . well, we may as well use them, now that you are all ready. Do you really want to use that canned soup? The cream of corn would be better."

"It doesn't make any difference. Whatever you think is best," Val answered, her company smile hurting her chapped, cracking lips.

What did she care now? Let the Neely girl have it her own way, the dinner was ruined anyway, not that it mattered. She didn't really mind. She didn't care about anything. She just wanted to crawl off in a corner somewhere, where she couldn't hear her talking, and shut her eyes. Her head felt like a drum.

Let Miss Neely fuss with the dinner if she wanted to. Let her drag that awful, miserable, shocking looking bird out, and exclaim over it, and slice off some of the good parts to broil! Some women LIKED to cook. She didn't! Oh, whatever, whatever in all the world made her think she'd like it?

Joe's whistle outside. "Here we are, Mrs. Carey! Here's the butcher boy, and the ice cream man, and the baker—"

And before Val could answer Pearl pushed right past her, crying, "Hello, Joey, bless your heart!" Bringing all that stuff! Here, give it to me! We're going to have a dinner yet!"

Just as if Joe were HER husband, and this were HER house!

"Feel all right, dear?" Joe asked anxiously, turning from Pearl and the bundles to her.

Val's drooping mouth was instantly made to smile. "Oh, just a little headache, but I'm all right."

"Headache? Take an aspirin and lie down for a little while!" Pearl screamed from the pantry. "Joe and I can manage without you. Can't we, Joey?"

Flat on her face on the bed Val pressed her hands against her smarting eyes, and noted with dull surprise that her head really did ache.

From the kitchen came the shrill staccato of the Neely girl's laughter. She could hear the murmur of voices. Joe seemed to be having a fine time. They were getting along without her, all right.

Pearl reminded her of someone . . . brassy hair, round red face and glassy eyes . . . Joe's mother! That was it! Mrs. Carey! Mrs. Carey when she was young and thin—well, not thin, but at least not so fat!

Thinking of the resemblance between them and all the mean things Aunt Julia had ever said about Mrs. Carey made her want to laugh out loud. Imagine Joe, falling for a girl who was enough like his mother to be her sister! It was so SILLY!

Though, of course, Joe had always been silly about his mother. She could stand that . . . But if he was going to get silly about this Pearl Neely . . .

Not that he would, of course.

After all, Joe was Joe, and it certainly wasn't very nice of her to lie there pretending she had a headache when this was their first dinner party and Mrs. Peacock would arrive any minute!

Thoroughly ashamed of herself, Val sprang up, hastily smoothed the bed, and straightened her hair.

Feeling like a bad-behaved visitor in somebody else's house she emerged from the bedroom just in time to open the door for Mrs. Peacock.

Dear, sweet Mrs. Peacock, her nose red from the cold, and her arms full of dried orange berries.

"There! They're pretty, aren't they? And they'll keep all winter. Whew! I'm out of breath . . . Who's that in the kitchen? Pearl? Here already! Well, I declare!"

"Oh, everybody's helping! They're all working but me," Val said with enormous brightness.

Mrs. Peacock laid off her wraps, looked anxiously toward the kitchen. "Don't you want to go in? Can I do anything?

"No, thank you, Mrs. Peacock. I think everything's getting along famously with Joe and Miss Neely."

Mrs. Peacock put her mouth close to Val's ear, tickling as she whispered, "Pearl—bossy!"

Val laughed, fonder than ever of nice, motherly Mrs. Peacock.

In the kitchen, Pearl was turning "a combination grill" with a long-handled fork.

"Feel any better, child? That's good. Look, we're having chop, bacon and a sliver of chicken, all broiled together. It was really the only way to salvage the poor chicken. And I couldn't find any bread."

DINNER PRAISED

Good heavens, she'd forgotten the bread! The chicken dinner menu hadn't a word about bread, though, of course, one had to have it.

"So I popped some biscuits into the oven," the beaming Pearl went right on, "and in two minutes everything will be ready to serve!"

So the dinner went off very well after all.

Mrs. Peacock praised it, ignoring Val's protestations that Pearl had cooked it. Pearl praised it. "If I did do it myself!"

Overruling Pearl's suggestion that they "do the dishes right now while we're in the mood, Val led the way back to the living room.

Joe tuned in some dance music.

Pearl began one of her endless "do you remembers?"

"Joe, remember the day the whole crowd went tobogganing at Columbia, and Rosamund Hendricks fell off and dragged you with her? I nearly died, you two looked so funny . . . And the day Ed Murphy and Mattie Shiller got married and we tied white satin ribbons all over Mattie's trunks! And I'll never forget the ride to the station when you—"

"That was nothing! Remember the ride we took when we were going to that place in Wisconsin for the moonlight picnic and you were afraid we'd be late and made me go fifty-five in that old heap I borrowed from Ed?"

Val sat looking straight in front of her, trying not to care.

Mrs. Peacock moved closer, began one of her family stories.

"Not than I'm not modern, you understand. But when you can't pick up your own grandchild . . . such a sweet little fellow, so much like Clarke was at that age . . . and she keeps him in nightgowns — nothing else, mind you—"

Val listened, heard. "It doesn't seem right to the baby. They like to see things . . . stuck in that buggy in the back yard all the time—"

Punctuated by Pearl's shrill "Yes, and remember the time that—"

"Will you ever forget—"

I'm just a stranger here, Val thought. I haven't any real part in Joe's life. I hate that Pearl Neely. She hates me. I love Mrs. Peacock, but she's just another Aunt Julia. It isn't any life for me . . .

"I think so, too . . . Indeed I do agree with you, Mrs. Peacock," she murmured politely.

And all the while she was waiting, waiting so hard that her muscles ached with it, for them to all go home, so that she could take Marjorie's letter, and read it again.

Synopsis

Valentine Macfarlane is practically deserted at the age of 8 by her gay, widowed mother, Millie. She is brought up by a manhating maiden aunt, Julia, and becomes a stenographer. After a brief infatuation for the dashing Lester Sherwood, she marries a neighbor boy, Joe Carey, and goes to Minneapolis, where Joe is an architect. Val knows little about housekeeping or cooking. To return favors of a neighbor woman, Mrs. Peacock, Val and Joe plan a dinner. They also invite Pearl Neely, a friend of Joe's. Val prepares most of the food improperly and it becomes spoiled. Pearl arrives and begins to take liberties about the place.

Now Go On

"Joe and I can manage without you," said Pearl.

Heart of a Wife

Madge Seeks Hugh's Aid in Planning Party

"Depends on me? The time of your coming back depends on me?"

I repeated Dicky's words incredulously, and he looked suddenly a trifle ashamed of whatever thought lay behind his words.

"Why! I thought with so many people around to help, you wouldn't need me," he answered. "Ede's telephone message, though it made me sorer than a butting goat, looked like an answer to a secret prayer."

"Do you mean to tell me," I said, stormily, "that you're going away because of an idiotic reason like that? If so, just unpack those bags this instant. 'Need you!' You know I can't put through the thing without you. You're perfectly horrid even to think such a thing. It isn't like you to be mean, Dicky."

"Thank you," he said, taking my hands in his and stooping to kiss me. "But you're mistaken. I do have to go in and see what's cooking on the magazine, but I'll be back tomorrow if you want me."

"You deserve to be told I don't," I said severely. "But you'll have to hurry if you get that train."

"I'm not going to take a train." He looked suddenly a bit sheepish. "It seems she's got hold of that new French cartoonist who's giving her an interview and some illustrations for an article—swell stuff. How she managed to convince him that it would be good publicity and so get those cartoons free is beyond me—she's clever that way—you can't get around that. She wants me to take him out to dinner, and I balk on dinner in the city until cold weather comes. The car will save long taxi fares."

TO ACCEPT AID

"You'll have a long drive, and it's been several hours since lunch. Shan't I have Katie fix you something?"

"No, don't bother—well, perhaps, a tomato sandwich."

"I'll tell her right away," I said, glad of the opportunity to get out of the room. From long experience with Dicky, I knew that I must interpret his tomato sandwich liberally, and, after telling Kate what to prepare, I dodged upstairs to my own room, where, behind my locked door, I fought myself back to composure.

There was one thing certain, I reminded myself, sardonically, this invitation of Edith's absolved me from refusing any aid that either Hugh Grantland or Philip Veritzen should offer me for my dinner-dance. I knew, intuitively, that both men would lose no opportunity to help make the affair a success, and I now had no qualms of conscience about accepting anything they wished to offer.

When Dickey came downstairs to the dining room I was awaiting him, apparently composed, and with nothing on my mind save a desire for his speedy return.

"Give Edith my best," I said, perfunctorily, when he was leaving.

HUGH IS GRATEFUL

He grinned at me mischievously.

"Best what?" he asked. "Love or a swift kick? The latter is what I feel like presenting to her. Well, so long! I'll be back tomorrow."

He kissed me, bade an affectionate goodbye to Junior and Roderick, volubly protesting his departure, and then, as is always his custom, kissed me again, with the words, "Mother last, you know," to Roderick. Then he was gone, and I turned back to the veranda, scoring myself for the mean little jealousy that had marked a certain insincerity in Dicky's protests against the trip. He might be annoyed at Edith's "slave driving," but he would enjoy this dinner with her and the famous cartoonist I was sure.

Hugh Grantland came up the steps as I came to this conclusion, and any woman will understand the impulse that put an extra cordiality into my greeting of him.

"I'm so glad you came just now," I told him, gayly. "You've saved me the trouble of telephoning you, and I'm too comfortable to move."

As he crossed to my couch hammock and held out his hand I saw again that lambent flame far back in his eyes.

"I hope you want some service of me," he said. "I should like to do something for you to repay just a slight part of your great kindness, and the trouble to which we have put you."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

The members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, which meets at the Etna-Harris Theater, Etna, each Saturday afternoon, were entertained by an elaborate stage show entitled "Junior Komic Club on Parade" with the following boys and girls taking part: Russell Holtje, master of ceremonies; Bob Walker, saxaphone solo; Dickie Hefler, harmonica solo; Martha Capell, recitation; Leona Zimmerman, toe dance; Lucille Wessolik, tap dance; Barbara Field, song; Jane Neff, song and tap dance; the Carrier sisters, song; Anna Marguerite Johnson, acrobatic dance; Russell Holtje, sailor hornpipe; Barbara Fields and Anna Marguerite Johnson, acrobatic team.

The members of this chapter more than enjoyed this show, as was shown by the amount of applause and cheering that greeted each new act. It was the first complete stage show of the new season, and it is expected that Morty Henderson, the manager, will have additional surprises for the youngsters next week. Next week the members of this chapter will elect a new set of officers who will serve for the month of October.

ARSENAL ACTIVITIES

Five of the youngsters who are members of the Arsenal Chapter entertained the patrons of the Dance Marathon at Motor Square Garden last night. They are: Betty Richards, Josephine Lang, Alberta Fundi, Josephine Baran and Bernadine Gressler.

The stage show at the Arsenal today was a song revue featuring old and new songs, and the members who participated were:

Mickey Sipple, Adeline Ciancio, Minnie Fundi, Josephine Lang, Josephine Baran and Francis Ciancio. Each of these youngsters sang an old song first and then one of the more popular songs of the day. The feature of this was that after singing the chorus the singer asked the members to join and sing along with them.

KENYON CHAPTER

Singing also occupied most of the time alloted to the meeting at the Kenyon Chapter this morning, and some of the songs sung were "You Got Me in the Palm of Your Hand," "Guilty," "I Need Loving," "A Shanty in Old Shanty Town." "Keepin' Out of Mischief" and "Somebody Loves You."

Among those taking part were Doris Sells, Rita Murgie, Helen Anthor, Helen Campbell, Eileen Kramer, Marian Clarke, Hazel Fretz and Marie Wells.

The marble-shooting contest, conducted by Bill Zeilor, of the Enright, reached the semi-final stages today and it is expected that the winner will be acclaimed at the meeting one week from today. Another dodge ball game kept the members shouting and cheering for almost 20 minutes, after which Miss Ruth Miller conducted the Enright dancing school.

It nearly knocked him out. He hadn't more than fairly got back to calling the strikes, until a fast low one took him on the shinbone. Maybe that didn't hurt. Then he got one on the shoulder. Naturally, it tickled the crowd to see Roy hop around when he got hit, and it didn't make Roy feel any better to notice that the muggs were laughing at him.

A Good Beginning

How to Make the Closed Dives Stay Closed Is the Problem—Brief Comment on Local News.

Although the number of indictments returned is not great, the grand jury which has been secretly investigating vice has made a good beginning. One of those indicted on the charge of taking money from the keepers of disorderly houses as the price of police non-interference is reported to be the henchman of a powerful politician who controls thousands of votes in the Hill district.

The indictment of a man with influential political connections as a grafter serves notice on politicians and the underworld that District Attorney Andrew T. Park and Judge Frank P. Patterson, under whose directions the grand jury acted, are not to be deterred from doing their duty by the fear of political reprisals when they come up for election.

If all our judges and other law enforcement authorities were as fearless as Judge Patterson and District Attorney Park, vice and corruption would not be so serious a problem. We suspect that many public officials who wink at racketeering and grafting would gladly suppress these evils, were it not for the fear that they would offend political leaders controlling large blocks of votes and as a result would lose their jobs.

The grand jury reports that the publicity given to Judge Patterson's warning that dives must go has resulted in the closing of many of the places. The problem is to see that they stay closed. The constables are notoriously lax, and the city police are worse than indifferent. District Attorney Park cannot be expected to police the city with his small force of county detectives.

The city police take their orders from Mayor Charles H. Kline. If racketeering is to be suppressed in Pittsburgh, if vice is to be curbed and the system of securing protection through bribery is to be destroyed, it will be necessary to gain the whole-hearted co-operation of the Mayor. The disorderly houses will not stay closed long, we fear, unless Kline forbids their reopening.

The Pennsylvania Water Company's withdrawal of its offer to sell the county the land needed to extend the Allegheny River boulevard through Nadine puts the county in a serious predicament. There seems to be no other way of building the boulevard as planned except to obtain the land through condemnation proceedings. And if, as some lawyers

Let George Carry the Rest!

(Copyright, 1932.)

Europe will not forget its guns, but is perfectly willing to forget that it owes the United States Treasury more than eleven thousand millions of dollars. And certain internationalists are perfectly willing to let George (the American taxpayer) assume the burden.

Europe can find millions to squander in a mad armament race, but pleads poverty when confronted with a just debt.

It is rumored that Europe will offer to pay Uncle Sam 10 cents on the dollar in full of its debt. That would mean, if such a scheme were put over, that 90 per cent of the eleven thousand odd million dollars would be transferred to the overladen backs of American taxpayers.

Roosevelt at Butte: Reed's Surrender

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

In his speech at Butte, Mont., it was natural that Mr. Roosevelt should have discussed the problem of silver which enters to a considerable extent into the explanation of our depression. As he says, there is no difference between the positions of the two parties as to purpose; and only a difference in method and in capacity for leadership. No one can doubt that unless something is done we must lose the enormous trade of the silver countries of the Orient.

No one is suggesting an abandonment of the gold standard here; no one believes that some of the countries in the Far East offering the richest of markets are going to adopt the gold standard; and every one knows that under existing conditions we shall go on losing our eastern markets until some international arrangement is perfected to make it possible for the silver countries to trade with us.

This is not a political question; it is an economic, a business problem. Business men engaged in international trade; economists and publicists; statesmen and financiers who have given any thought to the subject are agreed that something must be done about silver.

That is the reason that much more than a year ago the Congress by a unanimous vote, Democrats and Republicans voting together, adopted the Pittman resolution asking Mr. Hoover to call an international conference.

And Herbert Hoover has ignored the resolution.

Throwing Foreign Customers Out

This is in keeping with his notorious incapacity for leadership, his incurable timidity, his lack of decision, his temperamental inertia. It is in line with the tendency to drift and do nothing, in the Micawber hope that "something will turn up." Meanwhile other nations are strengthening their hold on the eastern markets of which we are entitled to a large share.

Mr. Roosevelt submits no definite program, since that is impossible without an international agreement; and there can be no such agreement without an international conference. He pledges himself immediately to call a conference—and that is the action Mr. Hoover has been sleeping on. Nothing will be agreed to of course that would be detrimental to sound currency.

But we cannot keep on throwing our foreign customers out the window or kicking them out the door and reasonably hope for the restoration of prosperity.

Senator Reed on Debt Cancellation

Not long ago we had occasion frequently to quote approvingly from the Senate, speeches of Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, in vigorous denunciation of the plan of the international bankers to transfer the debts of Europe to the backs of American taxpayers. The Senator gave himself no possible avenue of escape. He fairly boiled with indignation at the thought.

Under the circumstances one well may wonder at the leadership he is now apparently assuming in the formulation of a plan to accomplish that which four months ago he denounced as a vicious betrayal of the American people. His conference in London with Mellon and MacDonald; his conferences in Paris with Edge and Herriot, leave little reason to hope that he has not gone over bag and baggage to the group that is seeking to increase the tax burden of the American people by millions.

We expect him to return with a proper recantation, sugar-coated as much as possible with the verbiage of sophistry and cunning phrase. He will probably conclude that, after all, it is best to have a "settlement"—as though there had not been a settlement before. He will reiterate with swelling veins that he still is irrevocably opposed to "cancellation." And he will suggest a settlement at a "lump sum."

Since we all know what the lump sum owing us is, it is inevitable that his lump sum will mean the transfer of a vast part of the debt of Europe to this country. And that is "cancellation" for Europe, but no "cancellation" for the United States, which must pay off the bonds sold to get the money to loan to Europe.

And the answer of 99 out of 100 Americans has been phrased in the resolution of the American Legion which fought for America on the fields of Flanders:

"Whereas the government of the United States during the World War loaned to the entente allied nations billions of dollars for the purpose of carrying on the war against Germany and her allies, and this money was secured by the sale of government bonds to the citizens of the United States:

"Be it resolved by the American Legion that they are unalterably opposed to the cancellation of the whole or any part of the debts owed the United States by foreign governments, generally known as war debts."

"In whole or in part." That was Reed's position four months ago before he became the guest of Mellon in London.

This is the position of the Democratic party, declared unequivocally in its platform.

Fess' Bedtime Story

Senator Fess has made another speech; which is another way of announcing a new work of fiction; or, in this case, a reprint of a fanciful tale of which the people have long tired in these dire days of grim realism.

He invites us to share his enthusiasm for the President's "leadership" in meeting the depression which followed fleet-footed, on his promise to put "a chicken in every pot."

Unhappily he becomes specific. As a bedtime story we recommend this one: That as soon as the G. O. P. market bubble burst, despite the use of the bellows of brazen misrepresentation operated by Hoover, Mellon, Mills and Klein, Mr. Hoover called a "conference." And at this conference, dear children, he persuaded railroads and industries to agree to spend more than usual on improvements and repairs, and not to reduce wages or discharge their workers. And so these industries and roads gladly followed the leadership of the good father of his people, and that is the reason there has been such a speedy recovery and workingmen have not lost their jobs or suffered cuts in wages.

The fact that within a week many of these men in the conference were discharging men and cutting wages must not be permitted to interfere with the charm of the tale. But as a matter of fact, I myself, can name at least one of the participants in the conference who cut the wages of his men the next pay day.

Hoover 'Leadership' Is Taking Another Route

And so the cutting of wages has continued; and, month by month, more breadwinners have been turned into the streets, until now 11,000,000 are jobless—because of that "leadership." And since that time nothing has been done until within two weeks to offer government work to the jobless or to offer a penny of federal money to prevent starvation—because of that "leadership.' And, as Jack Garner so conclusively has shown from the record even the little now done, through the acts forced through by Wagner and himself, has been done despite that "leadership."

And now the Hoover "leadership" is taking another route—it proposes that workers having jobs on which wages have been cut twice shall now divide the job and the cut wages with others out of work. Thus shall all workingmen be reduced to a common level of poverty. Nor can business be improved—since this plan does not offer one cent more in wages to be spent with the merchants.

Only a Fess can rush in where angels fear to tread.

Marry-Go-Round

Still, They Sell Rings

A man never courts a girl without serious intentions, these days—the serious intention of staying out of marriage.

The honeymoon has waned when she says "Do you love me as much as ever, darling?" and he answers, "Sure! But you don't need another hat!"

* * *

It is getting harder and harder to write about anything subtle or interesting about love, these days, when the shortest distance between two points is that between the introduction and the clinch.

"Marriage," says Reno-Ruth, "is an expensive habit. Expensive for a man to get into and for a woman to keep on getting out of."

A good doctor is a psychologist who can look into a woman's eyes and see right through her headache to her martyr-complex. He prescribes a bromide, but the bigger part of his bill is usually for the dose of philosophy he hands her along with the prescription.

* * *

Nothing else has yet been found which held love together and braced it so securely as a little wedding ring.

A "misunderstood" man can always get a lot of sympathy; but it's no use for a woman to be "misunderstood," after she has to wear a chin-strap or tips the scales at 150.

A man marries a woman for what God made her; a woman marries a man for what she thinks she can make of him.

From the lavishness with which she smears it on every girl appears to think that hers is the smile that made the lipstick famous.

AT SEA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

AT SEA, Sept. 24.—The ship is maneuvering slowly into the Plymouth harbor. Out a porthole, England is a shadowy tracing against the orange sky. There is a chill to the air—spurious and raw, the iced breath of perfidious old Albion. It suggests a wee nip of doch and dorrach.

Gulls with curdling cries wheel over-head. This trip soon will be a memory. Romance has cut its snips and left its shreds. A voyage is but an interlude in travel. Young men who have whispered soft nothings, in a moon's glow, go on, perhaps without exchanging an address.

Yet, through it all runs a thin thread of sincerity. I never have made a crossing without forming at least one lasting friendship. This trip it is with a diamond expert from far off Kimberly—a meandering octogenarian, whose philosophy of contentment is heartening these grumbling days.

At 84, he has passed through four major panics, in each from riches to poverty. Today, he has several hundred dollars and a ticket to Copenhagen left out of what, three years ago, was an enormous stake. Yet, he has a rosey air of confidence. "It's all simple," he said. "I believe in God."

It always arouses my curiosity to know what people read at sea, and I peek at titles. My tastes for voyages lean to mystery and biography. The book being read by the larger number on promenade deck is, appropriately enough, "Promenade Deck," by Ishbel Ross, New York newspaperwoman.

Statistics are rarely worth reading, but these interested me. Snooping about the commissary I learn that on a round trip 9,000 tons of oil are used, 50,000 eggs, 25,000 pounds of meat, 95,000 pounds of ice, 17,000 pounds of flour, 350 tons of fresh water daily, 150 for the engines and 200 for the passengers.

Beer at 9 cents a large glass is the favorite tipple on all types of liners. Four years ago the two most widely sold drinks were cocktails and champagnes. This trip I've seen but three champagne buckets.

* * *

The tall cedar of Lebanon, Sam Hellman, bumped into an enthusiast from Pittsburgh in the bar who insisted upon being joined in a Puddler's Cocktail—straight whisky with a chaser of beer. Sam had popped up for air after tough going with a Christmas story. Reluctantly downing the libation, he returned to his typewriter. "It was great," he beamed. "Sleigh bells began to ring, Yule logs to glow, Santa went into his dance and, in no time at all, the trick was done."

* * *

Nearing land, I invariably think of the wives of seamen along the coast with hand-shaded eyes, straining for a glimpse of overdue ships, and Pierre Loti's oft quoted and gripping lines: "And all the hours of the day passed, one after another, and all the hours of the evening, all the hours of the night, all the hours of the morning. As she counted the hours when he ought to have been back, a wild terror seized her. She did not want any more to know either the dates or the names of the days."

An original Floradora girl is aboard. There are faint traces of the rapturous beauty of her Casino days, when "Tell Me Pretty Maiden!" was whistled and hurdy-gurdied in every block. She sits aft on an upper deck, reading awhile and looking out over the water. I noticed the book she read was "Ballerina," and I wondered if, in the neglect that is a pallbearer for fame, she might be reviewing old dreams with new fiction.

* * *

My coquetry for the trip was spent upon Ledia, a manicure girl. She commented upon my graying hair. "Distingue," she purred. Then I thought up one. "And you have flecks of shimmering gold in yours," I purred right back. Her expression had a vacuity of Rainbow scratching a flea, so she called the head barber to interpret. "I inquired," I lied, "if England was still off the gold standard." Otherwise it would have sounded sillier than all get-out.

* * *

From a near cabin, a joyous—he should be from the popping of corks—passenger yells through a porthole: "Land ho!" And to his "ho" I added a thin, wan "hum." Six days of oceaning and I'm tired of water. I want to kick up a little dust.

* * *

Servant palms are in furious itch in the companionway. I've often longed for nerve merely to shake each extended hand and chirp blandly: "Glad to have met-ten you boys. Regards to the folks. Vo-de-o-do!" And do an off-to-Buffalo down the gang plank.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

All day long I have been thinking of a thundering line I read:

"POVERTY IS A SOCIAL DISEASE AND SHOULD BE WIPED OUT, LIKE SMALLPOX"

Did you ever think of poverty in that way? Probably not. Most of us don't. When we think about poverty at all, which is usually not until it touches us personally, we think of it in one of two ways—

We think of it as something for which an individual is personally responsible; as something which an individual brings upon himself by his own laziness or extravagance or foolishness.

Or we think of it as an inevitable evil which is part of human life; as something beyond our control, to be endured with fortitude and resignation.

Now, there is a little truth in that first belief. A man can bring poverty upon himself, even in the best organized of programs. But there is no truth whatever in that second belief.

POVERTY IS NOT AN INEVITABLE PART OF HUMAN LIFE.

POVERTY IS NOT A DECREE OF GOD WHICH MEN SHOULD ACCEPT WITH RESIGNATION.

POVERTY IS AS PREVENTABLE AS FILTH.

WE CAN, IF WE WILL, ELIMINATE POVERTY FROM HUMAN LIFE; AND WE WILL NEVER BE CIVILIZED UNTIL AND UNLESS WE DO ELIMINATE IT.

"Poverty is a social sickness." The wise and powerful men who command our social system could eliminate that sickness. As they have made a plan to meet their own need, so they could make a plan which would answer the needs of all those other men who are unable to plan for themselves.

Every family could live in a decent home. Every man could have a job. Every child could have proper food, nursing and education. Every woman could have beauty around her and protection at her time of need.

Nor would it be very difficult to accomplish this. The wise and the powerful have already done far more difficult things. They have worked scientific miracles, performed engineering marvels, achieved financial wonders in their search for wealth and power.

They have done these things for their own need and their own profits; and if they would feel the need of obscure millions of human beings as keenly as they feel their own need, they could rescue those millions from misery, as they rescued themselves.

But there's the point. They DON'T and they WON'T TRY TO feel the other fellow's need as they feel their own. They are sure that his need is not as important as theirs.

THEY CLING STUBBORNLY TO THE OLD, STUPID, SAVAGE BELIEF THAT IF LIFE IS RUN PROFITABLY AND PLEASANTLY FOR THE CLASSES, THE MASSES WILL MUDDLE ALONG.

But they are wrong. The masses can't muddle along without involving the classes in that muddle. Over and over history has proved this by tragic disaster.

Poverty is a disease. That disease spreads.

EVERY POOR MAN IS A MENACE TO THE WORLD IN WHICH HE LIVES. NO NATION CAN ENDURE WHICH PERMITS POVERTY.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

There is such a thing as making yourself too much at home as a guest.

You may have an erroneous idea that your hostess would appreciate your visit more if you try to be like "one of the family."

Perhaps when you assume the role you carry it too far.

You may be a good friend, but the hostess does not expect you to go around opening closed doors.

They are kept closed for some reason, you may be sure.

The reason might not seem important to you, but the hostess thinks it so and that should be sufficient for you.

When the husband and father is at home he may want a word alone with his wife or some member of the family.

Don't be at all times under foot, as it were.

Every family has a few private matters and must discuss plans.

A man does not want to talk over his business matters before an outsider.

Perhaps you think it shows interest to open your hostess' wardrobe and look at her wearing apparel, but your hostess would not be impressed.

If she wants you to see her gowns she will call your attention to them.

Text For Today Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind—II. Timothy, i:6, 7.
